Modern Etiquette

Q—Are postscripts to letters considered in good taste?
A—Only when absolutely necessary. To be in perfectly good taste, one should take pains to include everything one wishes to say in the body of the letter. Postscripts tend to indicate haste and carelessness in the composition of the original letter.

Q—When a man is in the elevator of an office building, and a woman acquaintance enters, should he remove his hat?
A—He should lift his hat in greeting, but etiquette does not require that he remove his hat in a business elevator.

Q—When should a dinner guest who has finished eating place his napkin on the table?
A—Not until his hostess has placed her napkin on the table.

Q—If a bride's family is hard-pressed financially, would it be all right for her fiancé's father and mother to offer assistance in defraying the wedding expenses?
A—Decidedly not! The wedding expenses must be paid by the bride's family, no matter how meager the result. The bridegroom's family may, however, give an elaborate welcoming reception for them on their return from their honeymoon.

Q—When selecting monogrammed handkerchiefs for a man or woman which initial should be selected, that of the first or last name?
A—For a man it is always the last. For a woman, the last is customary, but the first is permissible.

Q—Is it proper to break crackers into one's soup?
A—This is considered improper. It is really considered correct to accept a second helping of food when your hostess offers it to you, or is this a sign of greediness?
A—One may certainly take a second helping if one wishes. It is a compliment to the hostess' cookery to do so. However, if you don't care for a second helping, you may say, "No, thank you."

Q—My fiancé's married brother is to be his best man at our wedding. Am I supposed to ask his wife to serve as one of my bridesmaids?
A—Not necessarily. It is your right to choose whomever you wish.
