

Heart Diseases Responsible For Over Half of Deaths

"Both the total number of deaths and the rate of deaths per 100,000 population from diseases of the heart and blood vessels dropped in 1954, as compared with 1953, but they still kill more than one-half of the people who die in this country each year," said Dr. John G. Smith of Rocky Mount, president of the North Carolina Heart Association at Winston-Salem yesterday.

In a report to the membership at the annual meeting being held this week in Winston-Salem, Dr. Smith stated that "The 1954 figures published by the National Offices of Vital Statistics also make it plain that heart diseases continue to take a heavy toll among people in the most productive years, the ages under 60. In this age group there were 232,750 deaths during 1954. This was 35.2 per cent of all deaths occurring under the age of 65 or more than double the number caused by cancer, the next leading cause of death in the under-65 age group."

Several hundred North Carolina physicians and volunteer workers are meeting in the twin-city to hear of latest developments in heart research and to make plans for the annual heart fund campaign which occurs each year in February. "February is heart month and Sunday, February 26, 1956, will be 'Heart Sunday," reported Dr. Smith. The following is a breakdown of the six leading causes of death in 1954 in North Carolina:

1. Diseases of the heart and blood vessels, 16,037; 2. Cancer, 3,768; All accidents, 2,502; 4. Influenza and pneumonia, 1,211; 5. Immaturity, 794; 6. Nephritis and nephrosis, 552.

Total deaths in North Carolina last year reported by the State Board of Health were 31,482. This means that heart deaths were heaviest, taking 50.7 per cent of that total.

New Boone Variety of Irish Potato May Be Answer to Blight Problem in N. Carolina

Irish potato growers may find a solution to their late blight problems with the new Boone variety of potato.

This new potato variety, which was developed through the cooperation of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station, State college, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture, can help prevent the killing of plants, reduced yields and rot frequently caused by late blight. The Boone is highly resistant to the common race of the late blight fungus.

An average of three years records at Hendersonville and Jefferson shows Boone to slightly outyield both Kennebec and Sequoia. In individual tests, Boone and Sequoia produced about the same yields where no late blight was present. In tests where late blight infestation was heavy, however, Boone greatly outyielded Sequoia.

A total of eight and a half acres of Boone was grown this year under contract with the North Carolina Foundation Seed Producers, Inc. Plantings in Henderson, Haywood, Avery and Ashe counties should produce some 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of this seed for planting the 1956 crop.

D. W. Bennett, Henderson county agent, reports that John R. Moore, a vegetable farmer in the Shaw's Creek section of the county, has an excellent demonstration of the new Boone variety. He compared it with Kennebec which he usually grows. Moore says that he thinks the Boone variety is a smoother potato than the Kennebec, yields about 10 to 15 per cent more than Kennebec and is one of the best potatoes he has ever eaten. Moore planted about 500 pounds of the Boone variety and certified them this year. This seed will be available to other Henderson county farmers.

The upright growth of the Boone variety leads to reduced injury to plants by the wheels of equipment passing through to spray or dust for insects, as well as aiding in plant removal at harvest time.
