Health and Beauty

It seems the easiest thing in the world to feed a baby. Then you start to do it and that is the end of that idea. You never know whether the baby is taking the food too fast or if he is getting enough.

ABOUT YOUR HOME

By FRANCES DELL

Most adults don't realize that one must learn to swallow solid foods. It is not as simple and natural as breathing. A new baby must learn new uses of his tongue and throat muscles when he first begins to eat fine-strained baby foods.

Patience is the key to dealing with children and babies. This is doubly true during the first weeks of learning. Some babies learn faster than others. You must help the baby learn to eat without forcing him.

It is best to introduce new foods one at a time and in very small amounts. A new flavor or a new texture most often meets with resistance on the part of the baby. Don't worry, however, he will be some used to new things and will accept them. It is usually a slow process.

Never try to force new foods on him—simply introduce it again the next day. Another good suggestion is to offer new foods at the beginning of the meal, when baby is hungry, rather than when his appetite is satisfied.

Be very careful when feeding a baby. Their mouths are tender and easily bruised. When the baby is a little older, his gums may irritate him and here again patience in abundance is important. Be careful during feeding that you do not strike a tender spot where a new tooth is about to come through.

Many a man has a kick coming that never reaches him.
