A Look Into the Future

Dr. Wilhelm Starlinger, noted German physician who was held in a Russian political prison for six years, until last year, has written a most absorbing book, dealing with Russia, Russia's future, and the motivations that move the Russian people.

Dr. Starlinger talked with many Russians in his six years inside Russian prisons. He had the opportunity to talk with generals, high political office-holders who had been ousted, farmers, industrial workers and every type of citizen that today makes up Communist Russia. His book is so stimulating it is said to have had a tremendous influence on West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

The most intriguing conclusion drawn by Dr. Starlinger is as follows: The German physician believes that Russia is faced with several problems which cannot be solved simultaneously. First, the Russian people do not have enough food, and the problem of raising the living standards and improving the morale of farmers cannot be solved as long as emphasis is being placed on heavy industry, as it is to-

Second, the Russians cannot provide the aid to Red China, their principal ally, that China needs to expedite progress in raising its living standard and proceeding with an allout program of industrialization.

Dr. Starlinger believes the only way the Kremlin can prevent serious distractions inside Russia, and stresses in her economy, is to reimpose a completely terroristic reign such as that exercised by the deposed Secret Police leader L. P. Beria. If such a reign of terror is not reimposed, then Russia will have to expand her trade, perhaps use her gold reserves to do this, and lower her armaments and military preparations to help solve the economic and food problems inside Russia.

Dr. Starlinger believes Russia faces one mortal question which will present the United States with a great opportunity. He says Russia cannot aid China as rapidly and as voluminously as the 500,000,000-Cinese-Communist nation desires. Only one country can do this and that is the United States.

Communist China and the United States must eventually reach some sort of an agreement, he says, and that will suddenly and immediately weaken the ties between Russia and China and pose Russia with the problem of possible discord on both fronts—the West

Only in Manchuria and northward and northwestward, can China find adequate living area. Eventually, then, Russia and China will face each other in the region of the Amur

This region, Dr. Starlinger asserts, will eventually become the most dangerous and critical area in the world. He believes that and Mrs. Garland Jackson and famthree great powers will be prominent and dominant some years hence-Russia, China and the United State. The United States will be the strongest of the three, and it is likely, according to Dr. Starlinger, that China will be the second most powerful.

come to an understanding with Communist Hall's, Mr. and Mrs. U. M. Ennis China, in later days, if that nation can be successfully wooed from the Russian orbit, or even neutralized. Such a development would improve the position of the free world in Europe-on the other side of Russia-immeasurably, since it would present Russia with a two-front problem, such as that which has faced Germany for the last 50 years and which has beaten Germany in two World Wars.
