CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

Co-operative marketing means an orderly selling, a selling of produce as it is wanted, intended to prevent the rushing of so much of a certain produce on the market in a short period of time that the market becomes glutted and the price drops.

There are organizations formed to assist in marketing several kinds of farm produce, and to enable growers to wait for a demand for their produce these organizations borrow money to make advances on this produce, so instead of congested markets there is a regulated supply and better prices for produce.

This combining of interests is the only thing that has been proposed, in our day, that has offered any hope to growers for a chance at a say in the selling price of their toll. And this is the first time a farmers' organization has had the offer of financial backing to hold their produce for fair prices. A farmer cannot combat the world. He isn't able. And buyers of farm produce have never been disposed to pay more than they are obliged to.

The officers, or managers, of these organizations are elected by boards of directors who are chosen by the members of the various organizations from their own membership, and these directors are responsible for the conduct of the affairs of these organizations. They fix the salaries of the officers and employees who attend to the business of the organizations.

To illustrate the advantages of such organizations, we refer you to the prices of any produce in which there is co-operative marketing, and those in which no organization has been effected, or prices before organization and afterward. It's too manifest to argue.

But as we are not a member, we say the directors of the tobacco growers' association were lavish in their bestowal of wages and salaries, as we learn from the evidence in the Greenville trial recently. Such will help to destroy the organization, notwithstanding the tobacco trusts have made millions of dollars where tobacco associations make pennies. If there was not some advantage to growers in organizations of this kind, and a disadvantage to many others you would not see this relentless war being waged against these organizations. No one but the speculator would suffer, were the idea fully carried out.

Raeford stores are well stocked with home folks.

Mr. E. L. Peele has opened a grocery in the store recently vacated by Mr. W. F. Walters.

The Saunders Warehouse in Aberdeen opens Sept. 24th with a big sale, and one thing we've noticed and that is the Aberdeen market has always been one of the best in the State.

The Raeford graded and high schools opened Monday with the largest enrollment in its history, and of course still others will come in. Now the school has settled down to regular work, and as it is believed a good corps teachers have been employed, a successful year is predicted.

Middling cotton sold Wed. at 27 1/2.

Miss Lee Anne Geddie of Rose Hill spent last week with her brother, Dr. Kenneth B. Geddie.

One of Mr. J. P. Smith's new tobacco barns was recently destroyed by fire, before he had had time to use it much.
