Fat Workers

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the output per man-hour in iron and steel industry has increased 50 per cent since 1914, when most of the men were on a 12-hour day schedule. Now, men hold an 8½-hour day, and a 15-hour shift, which is equivalent to a 16-hour day.

Practically all men now work 16 hours a day, and the number of iron and steel workers, where the output per man is now three times as great as it was 12 years ago. The Outlook
