One man may play a good game of baseball all by himself, but it wouldn't be the kind of baseball that draws crowds to see. It takes nine good players on each side to make the game attractive. One man may be successful in business all by himself, but he has his limitations, and if he has more customers than he can wait on he loses that business he might have gotten had he had help. By having help he would help his helper and accommodate more people. Team work helps as much in business as in sports.
