Attention is the stuff memory is made of. Give more attention and your memory will improve.

States rights should never be defined to mean the annulment of the rights of any other state.

This campaign will be waged against and for prohibition, with the odds and a lot of money against.

No man has the right to require more hardships of another than he willingly accepts upon himself.

We hear it said women now drink and smoke. We haven't seen any of them so engaged but if they do, we will go down all the faster.

The tendency of humanity is always downward, if we follow our natural inclinations and desires. Only the help of the Almighty keeps any of us out of the basest iniquity.

They do it in the name of advanced science, but the reason the Bible and Christianity is criticised is because the critics are on their way to hell and want to take everybody else with them.

If liquor is turned loose on the country, all restrictions removed with automobiles and airships as our modes of travel, the death rate would increase in spite of medical science, for a man never knows when he's drunk.

And a drunken man is of all things the most obnoxious of nuisances; let's have fewer of them. A man never knows how capable of meanness he is until he is drunk. A man who drinks a drop should not hold office.

The conference at Asheville last week of those who oppose any changing or weakening of the prohibition laws would not entertain a motion to launch a third party. Third parties have never thrived long.

The United States has a better prospect for pork this year than it has had in some time. There are more hogs this year, and bacon will not be so high priced next year, if disease does not change the situation.

Some are quitting the Democratic party and some are just joining, so what the result of the election to be held on the 6th of November is problematical, beyond anybody's guess. Never before in the history of American politics has there been a campaign that started as has this one. We have no idea of what the results will be.

Some northern papers say that the only drunks removed from the convention hall in Houston were from Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina. That's an ugly story to be telling, and Joe along, too, and so many sisters. And The News and Observer says the story is alright, except it is a lie out and out, and that not a North Carolina delegate nor alternate was drunk or disorderly. These papers are trying to give prohibition a black eye, pretending the law does no good. We all know better than that. It is a great help, poorly enforced as it is.

As A Prohibitionist Sees:
"One is compromised of the lawless elements of the great cities of America. The great danger is in the cities with large foreign populations, otherwise lack of moral principles and lack of American idealism.

"We are at the beginning of a battle between the cities of America and the rest of America and American ideals. We may witness the downfall of American democracy.

"Furthermore the nomination of Governor Smith brings about a referendum on the prohibition amendment. I hate the traffic of liquor. It is a perilous hour. Let no man think there will be no fighting. Smith is no fool. He is no statesman, but he is a politician.

"I will not vote for Smith. I will vote against him as a Democrat. I intend to vote for Hoover and Curtis."

The above is quoted from a statement by Dr. Patton, a Baptist minister of Atlanta, Ga., to those attending the prohibition conference in Asheville recently.

In Recorder's Court.
In State vs Henry Townsend for non support of wife and children, a compromise nolle prosequit with leave was entered upon condition defendant pay $25 for previous support of family, support them hereafter and pay cost.

State vs. Henry McNeill was continued until Aug. 28th.

Make Johnson was called out in court, and his bond of $50 forfeited.

We have known watermelons to sell so low people couldn't see what they got for 'em, but the demand so far this year is good, yet we expect the price to go to pieces, for there's a big crop.

On the night of June 10th, a black mare mule strayed from the barn of R. O. Bobbitt of Aberdeen and the day following he traced it to near Raeford, but the owner has never recovered his mule.

Last year the Commissioner of Revenue stopped the hauling of peaches on trucks, or tried to, and there was trouble over this mode of transportation down in Columbus county in the spring during the strawberry season, but judging by the number of trucks hauling peaches and cantaloupes they are complying with the law. We do not believe truck owners living in the state should be required to pay an extra license for hauling overripe cantaloupes, peaches or other fruits to markets within, or even outside the State, for in so doing they help people who have lots of fruits going to waste, and who are needing the money to pay taxes and other debts.

Big Crop Yields Support Practice Of Side-Dressing

Cotton absorbs nitrate nitrogen most rapidly when it is applied 30 to 40 days after planting, scientists at the Alabama Experiment Station have found after years of study of cotton fertilizers under all sorts of conditions. The method of fertilizing cotton as developed at this Station provides for putting down all the acid phosphate and potash and one-quarter of the nitrate of soda at planting time, three-fourths of the nitrate of soda being held for side-dressing applications shortly after the first chopping. The Station recommends nitrate of soda as the source of nitrogen. Thousands of farmers in this state attest to the success of this recommendation which is known as the Auburn Method.

John R. Witt, Bell Mina, Ala., 1927 Master Farmer, says, "I have been using nitrate of soda for seven years and know that if properly applied it will double the yield of cotton."

H. H. Goodman of Ashland, Ala., says, "In the future I intend to use 300 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre. I will not rent land to a tenant who will not agree to use at least 200 pounds per acre, for farming without nitrate of soda is a losing game. Soda is increasing my yield 75 to 100 per cent."
