A TAR HEEL IN NEW YORK

By BOB COVINGTON

I've seen Ed just two times since I knew him at Davidson College. The first time, six years after I left college, I was having lunch in a restaurant when a waiter approached my table and said, "Is your name Covington? There's a young fellow over here who thinks he knows you." Several tables over, I saw Ed eating alone, looking just about as he had when I had last seen him as a Freshman at Davidson.

A few minutes talk brought out the fact that he had been in the oil business in Oklahoma and was on his way to Venezuela to help open up some new oil fields in the South American republic. This week, I saw him again. And the oil fields have been opened up.

Such has happened in the last four years to add interest and excitement to the job this young southerner has been doing. A gigantic campaign is being waged in the United States to establish closer ties with South America. In Europe and Asia battle lines

MOVIE STAR JOINS U.S. NAVY

Ensign Wayne Morris Seeks Wings

Wayne Morris, recent star of "I Wanted Wings," became a member of Uncle Sam's Navy in May, 1941, when he was appointed to the rank of Ensign.

When asked what he thought of the United States Navy, Morris said, "I think every man who is considering joining a military service should look into the 'chance of a lifetime' which the Navy and Naval Reserve offer to get into the big-pay field of the future—aviation. In the Navy you can attend the finest flight training schools in the world, and receive instruction from Navy pilots who introduced dive bombing, aircraft carriers and catapult take-offs to the rest of the world. Also, there are opportunities in Naval Aviation for men who don't want to fly. They can be trained as aviation machinists, metalsmiths, photographers, observers, or they can receive instruction in many other trades. It's a great life in the Navy."

follow pipe lines and oil fields are major military objectives. And the penetration of Germans into South America is a matter of personal interest to all Americans.

Ed's work in Venezuela is with an American oil company that has important leases in the rich oil fields there. As assistant to the general superintendent, he worked on the surveys of the oil country, in establishing camps, drilling wells and now in producing and transporting the oil.

His headquarters are in a little river town of the thousand inhabitants, two hundred miles up the Orinoco river, accessible only by boat or plane. In this town of adobe houses roofed with palm leaves, there are three American families, a British consul and the family, a few Germans and Dutch. Ed lives in a little American-type bungalow he has built out of jungle hardwood and roofed with corrugated iron. From this town he flies every week to half a dozen different oil fields in the wild interior of Venezuela.

The flights are made in a tri-motored passenger plane, flown by a former pilot and co-pilot of a commercial airline. Landing fields have been built at the oil camps as one of the first jobs when they were established. Food and equipment are flown in to the camps each time and Ed says that he often has a hard time finding a place between the cans of beans and evaporated milk.

The oil fields are run by foreigners (Americans) but most of the labor is native, negroes from the coast who have come over from Jamaica, Trinidad and other islands, and Indians from the interior of Venezuela. Wages are good. The lowest wage paid for unskilled labor is the equivalent of $2.40 per day and it goes as high as $6.00 per day. Work in the oil fields is practically the only source of income in many sections of the interior.

According to Ed, the government of Venezuela tries to maintain an impartial attitude toward foreigners, making arrangements with all comers if they seem to be for the benefit of the country. However, Americans have made big progress in developing the oil resources of the country. The government keeps a tight rein on communications. No telephone lines go to the interior, all communication being by government operated radio. The building of highways and railroads has been forbidden. As for the Nazis in Venezuela, their public meetings and parades have been forbidden, though they are still probably carried on in secret.

In the town where Ed lives, there is a large German supply house, handling everything from nails to farming equipment. The manager seems to have a lot of trouble with his personnel because he is always bringing in strapping young Germans who work with him a while and then go away. Just before Ed left, a number of Germans were arrested for clearing off and leveling a mountain side. The Venezuelan authorities thought it might be for an airplane landing field. The Germans said they were going to plant corn.

MENU

SPICY GINGER SQUARE

2 cups sifted flour
1-4 cups sifted flour
1-4 teaspoon soda
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon ginger
Glazed apple quarters
6 teaspoons butter
1-2 cup sugar
1 egg
2-3 cup molasses
3-4 cup sour milk or buttermilk.
Sift flour, soda, salt, baking powder and ginger together. Cream butter and sugar. Add egg, beating it in. Add molasses. Add flour alternately with the milk. Pour into greased pan 8x8x2 and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes. (May be baked in well-greased ring mold.) To serve place glazed apple quarters on top. Serve with sweetened whipped cream if desired.

Old-Fashioned Spicy Doughnuts

1-1 cups milk
1-4 cup shortening
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1 cake compressed yeast
6 1-2 cups sifted flour
1 1-2 teaspoons cinnamon
1-4 teaspoon nutmeg
1-8 teaspoon mace
3-4 cup sugar
3 eggs

Scald milk. Add shortening and salt and cool to lukewarm. Add crumbled yeast and 3 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Cover and let rise until bubbly. Mix spices with sugar and add to sponge with beaten eggs. Mix well. Add remaining flour to make a dough that can be kneaded. Knead until smooth. Cover and let rise until almost double in bulk. Roll out 1-2 inch thick. Cut or mold. For cruller twists, roll small portions of dough under the hand and twist the dough back on itself. Let rise on board until almost doubled in bulk. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees F.) 3 minutes, or until lightly browned, first on one side then on the other. Drain on unglazed paper. Yield: about 3 dozen doughnuts.

Sugar Plum Tarts.

1 1-2 cups sifted flour
1-2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 teaspoon salt
Granulated sugar
1 egg
1-2 cup milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening
1 dozen blue plum (halves).
Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Beat egg, add milk and shortening. Stir into dry ingredients, mixing only enough to moisten them. Pour into 2 inch paper baking cups or greased muffin tins. Place a plum half on top of each cake and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake in hot oven (420 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes. If self-rising flour is used omit baking powder and salt from the recipe. Yield: 1 dozen 2 in. cakes.
