State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

QUESTION: Should I sell my beef calves dropped in February or try to carry them over into next year?
 ANSWER: Leland Case, in charge of Extension Animal Husbandry, suggests that under your conditions it is best to sell the calves now because calves with their calf fat on them are worth more money per pound than yearlings. "It is my belief that if you have extra feed for wintering cattle and plenty of pasture, you would do better in keeping a larger cow herd rather than hold your calves over," Case says. "Some of our most successful commercial cattlemen are creep feeding their calves, while they are running with the cows, thus putting some extra weight and finish on them, which means higher prices."

 QUESTION: Can you give me some help in running bats out of my house?
 ANSWER: Since bats feed upon insects while on the wing, there is no way of poisoning them. It is hard to shut bats out of an old established roost because there are so many openings. L. C. Whitehead, district agent of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service at State College, suggests that you carefully close all the openings except one and then when the bats have left on their nightly search for food, close the remaining opening. Whitehead has also been successful in driving bats from attics, double walls, and other enclosed places in buildings by the use of naphthalene flakes. The bats object to the odor of this material and will usually desert the premises. The treatment may have to be repeated.

QUESTION: What is the best small fruit for the home garden?
 ANSWER: Mrs. H. M. Chandler of the White Cross community in Durham county has strawberries, raspberries, dewberries, and bunch grapes. Late frosts killed the blossoms of all fruits except the Dixie variety of raspberry and the late blooms of the strawberries. In spite of this Mrs. Chandler sold 50 quarts of strawberries on the curb market and used 12 quarts at home from 4 rows 7 1/2 feet long in the first year. H. R. Niswonger, Extension horticulturist, says that Mrs. Chandler now has her strawberries absolutely clean and is taking out plants from the old bed for setting new rows. The rows are 15 inches wide and the runner plants have not been allowed to grow. The other fruits have been mulched with straw to maintain moisture and keep down weeds.
