THE SMARTEST SOLUTION to the cold weather problem is a wool weskit. Because it's sleeveless and free from bulk, you can hide it snugly under a coat, don it proudly in the office or at home as an important accessory atop anything in the tailored line—blouse or dress.

Ingrid Bergman, exquisite star of "The Bells of St. Mary's," a Rainbow production released by RKO Radio, indicates that a clever girl can keep warm and still be well-dressed. Here she is in a woolen vest tossed over a long-sleeved sport blouse. Handknit, the vest has self-colored fringe ingeniously devised with tape and hooks to snap on to the shoulder indoors, snap off to wear under a coat on a jaunt out. Brilliant embroidery on the front bodice adds a note of gayety.
