BECOMING LINES FOR MATURE FIGURE

THE well dressed woman looks for the kind of Summer wardrobe that she can assemble and forget about, clothes made especially for her proportions and therefore well-fitting, and which will keep her cool and collected.

Realizing that simplicity and a certain smart dignity are more becoming to the mature figure than many of the newest trends, New York's famed designers of women's fashions continue to feature such favorites as the indispensable sheer, the small-patterned useful print, and the jacket dress assuring its wearer of "the complete costume look." Nonetheless, the new collections prove that many of this season's trends—the longer jacket line, hip-line variations, diagonal treatments, and sleeve and neckline interest—can be youthfully adapted to women's sizes.
