KNIT TOUCHES ARE NIFTY

The news on the fashion front for fall is in knit trimming. When you shop, you'll see it combined with fabric and fur. Cloth spectator sports clothes will feature magnificently designed knitted yokes, fur coats a novel knitted waistband. Colored knit will set off the functional styling of a daytime dress and will provide glittering contrast excitement against dark dinner crepes. Knit will show itself in accessories, too—giving style emphasis to hats, bags and gloves.

A new version of the classic suit . . . created by Jane Wynn, who co-stars with James Stewart in Robert Riskin's "Magic Town." A Wynn Wellman Production released by RKO Radio.

The grey cloth skirt is a slim stem for the jaunty jacket, which will shine on rugged living in country city, will be familiar for football games, will even take the subway with good honour. Surrounding the dress are knitted collar, sleeves and a wide waistband in lighter shade. There is a matching hand-knit bag to complete the ensemble.

Bright, economy-minded girls welcome the idea of knit finishing. Knitting new hems on trousers, woolen clothes to meet the requirements of skirt length. Go all out on this theme. Knit a new yoke to put on a familiar dress; knit several knitted blouses to wear with a heavy greatcoat . . . knit or crocheted a good-looking drawstring bag to keep your dark, colorful tapper up-to-date . . . knit glove wardrobe, a pair of grey daytime slippers, in shades of each of your outfits. Then, to be in the swing of fashion, knit a bag of silken threads to give brilliant sparkle to formal evening dress.

One of the most stylish evening gowns on the fall horizon is an elegant hand-made boucle affair with a slightly flared skirt, a draped bodice, no shoulder straps at all, to make you as irresistible a siren as the sun. Knit model it copies. Another item that promises to tip the scales of fashion next season is a heavy cable-knit afternoon shortie in a royal blue shade that will do credit to your finest informal frocks.

Color-fred threads knit into a wide yoke and around the hemline sparkle glowing importance into this black dinner dress on Ann Sothen. The blonde co-star of Alexander Knox in RKO Radio's poignant romance, "Indian Summer," prizes her frock for its bright lure; its subtle, timeless lines and the bold slit skirt. Her ankle strap pumps are of black satin. She wears no gems, preferring not to divide the attention. Wear plain gold bracelets and matching earrings, if you like, but stay away from costume jewelry—moonstones, being a lonely exception.
