

MORE ABOUT Lumberton Market

crop is much better, and it brings a better price because it is graded and tied.

No matter whether the opening day average is 45, 50, or 55 cents Tobacco Town, as Lumberton is fast becoming known, was all optimism today, and the local tobaccoists and merchants were busy completing final preparations for the big event—Opening Day.

Lumberton will greet the new season with the same adequate facilities and staff as last season. This includes buyers from all the major companies, three large independent companies with their own re-drying plants in the same town, and six firms operating eleven warehouses with a prompt, high sale by each firm every day.

The personnel on the warehouse floors, which is made up of the most skilled and experienced sales managers, auctioneers, clerks, and assistants that money can hire, will also be familiar to Lumberton's thousands of steady and satisfied patrons.

In fact, the only two changes of importance are that Russell Livermore, Jr., has joined his father in the firm of Liberty Warehouse 1 and 2, and M. R. Alexander has replaced Bob Rankin as Sales Supervisor.

The proprietors of Lumberton's 11 warehouses, who rank with the best in the game are:

Britt's Warehouse—Edward DeJarnette and Lee Woody.

Carolina Warehouses—J. E. Johnson, Adrian McRae, Marvin Roycroft, and Alf Forbes.

Dixie Warehouses—Neil McKeithan, F. K. Briggs Sr. and Alex Kinlaw.

Hedgpath Warehouse—Rom Hedgpath, Johnny Roycroft, H. H. Hicks and R. L. Rollins.

Liberty Warehouse—Ed Wilkins, Frank White, H. D. (Mutt) Goode, and Russell Livermore, Jr.

Smith Warehouse—Tom J. Smith and Paul Sands.

The heads of Lumberton's three big local independent companies which are a major part in the building of any market, are W. E. Elmore, Interstate; R. M. Garrett and E. K. Howard, Person-Garrett, and J. B. Rountree, Whitehead and Anderson.
