"What's fertility-level check planting, and why will it give me more corn and fewer nubbins?" a fellow asked me one day.
 "Well, you know, an ordinary planter checks either 2, 3, or 4 kernels per hill—7,840, 11,760, or 15,680 kernels per acre. But suppose your soil's fertility level requires a kernel population somewhere between those figures?"
 "Right now, I'm just out of luck," he said.
 "No, you're not. With the new, high-speed, clutchless McCormick 'population planter', you can plant somewhere between those 7, 11, or 15 thousand. There are 18 different speeds to give you any in-between rate. And you can drill or hill-drop to any per-acre population, too."
 "Sounds good to me... and I like the planting units in front, too, where I can watch them and the marker-track at the same time."
 "To say nothing of handy fingertip Farmall Touch-Control to lift and lower the planters," I reminded him.
 "From now on it's more corn and less nubbins for me, too. Order me a Farmall C corn planter right now!"
