

Home Agent's Narrative Report For July

The fourteen Home demonstration Clubs met in Hoke County in July with 175 women present. Leaders gave the demonstration in the Buchan Club and the Home Agent in the others. The demonstration was on "Useful Articles from Feed Bags." The women enjoyed seeing a wardrobe made from feed bags that was loaned by the National Cotton Council. This consisted of children's clothes, girls and Women's dresses, and evening dresses. Other feed sack articles were shown and the club women were asked to wear dresses made from feed sacks. Prizes were given in several of the clubs for the most attractive dress.

The Antioch Club served the County Commissioners, the County Auditor, the Librarian and the Superintendent of Welfare, the first Monday in July.

Mrs. Mary L. McAllister, District Home Agent, spent a half-day in the county on July 13.

The Farm and Home Agents attended a meeting of agents from the Southeastern District in Fayetteville on July 21.

The Home Agent and Mrs. Luke Dehume assisted with a Community Sing at the Montrose Building on the evening of July 12.

The Pine Forest Club sponsored a community picnic at their community building on July 4th.

Six girls and three boys from Hoke County, together with the Home Agent spent the week of July 24-29 at State College attending annual 4-H Club Week. Annie Blue Cameron represented the county at the State dress revue and was selected as one of the 10 winners in the state. The Hoke County group had charge of Vespers in Riddick Stadium on Tuesday evening. Billy Everleigh, Ellen Kate Koonce, Lyda Williams, Mary McLean and Annie Blue Cameron took part on the program.

Turkish Tobacco Is 'Tricky' Crop

"Tricky" is the word for Turkish aromatic tobacco, says William D. Lee, soil specialist for the State College Extension Service.

In fact, says Lee, Turkish leaf probably is the "trickiest" crop grown commercially in the State. It is far more responsive to nitrogen and organic residues in the soil than are any other crops.

For example, Lee asserts, an application of only 10 pounds of nitrogen per acre, made on a field which apparently needs a "stimulant," will cause rapid growth with thick, dark-green leaves—and resultant low quality.

On fine-textured soil (silt loams and clay loams) the growth is very poor; on deep sandy loams the growth is strong to excessive. On eroded or galled spots the plants grown slowly or in some cases not at all.

Where terrace ridges have been "pushed up" from topsoil, the plants are tall and rank, with large, coarse leaves. In the terrace flow line, plants may "drown" or grow only slightly.

Summing up, Lee says the more suitable soil conditions for Turkish tobacco appear to be: (1) medium-thick loams with moderately open subsoils, (2) a moderate level of fertility (about 30-bushel corn land) and no freshly turned or recently added organic material. Manure should be worked into the soil in late fall or early inter ahead of the aromatic tobacco crop. Fall turned lespedeza is all right but probably, it is better to avoid a field where clover has been grown the previous year.

Three new farm ponds have been reported recently—one in Cabarrus and two in Union County.
