

State College Plans Farm Short Courses

Short courses in beef cattle production, crop production, and dairy production will be held at N. C. State College, Raleigh, from January 8 to February 2, it was announced this week by Dr. J. H. Hilton, dean of agriculture at the college.

The courses, designed to be of practical value for any farmer and especially for young men just beginning full-time farming, are open to anyone above 16 years of age who is interested in improving his knowledge of agriculture. Veterans eligible for training may take these courses under the "G. I. Bill."

Application should be made as early as possible but not later than December 15. Application blanks and further information may be obtained from Eugene Starnes, Division of College Extension, State College Station, Raleigh.

The beef cattle production course, under Professor Lemuel Goode, will cover such subjects as starting a beef enterprise, feeding and management, control of diseases and parasites, marketing pasture and forage crops, and farm management. A three-day tour of leading beef farms in the Coastal Plains and Piedmont sections will be made.

The crop production course, directed by Professor E. T. York, will emphasize farm and soil management, weed control, tobacco, corn, cotton, small grain, pasture and forage crops, soybeans, and peanuts.

Professor F. M. Haig will supervise the dairy production course, which will cover herd management, pasture and forage crops, judging and selection, disease, milk sanitation, and artificial breeding.

About 40,000 turkeys are being produced in Pamlico County this year, according to turkey specialists at State College.

The 1950 apple crop in Australia was below normal and prices paid by fresh users and canners were high.

Meat production under Federal inspection during the week ended November 11 totaled 339 million pounds.
