

"New Look" To Greet Visitors To State Fair

A "new look" will greet the more than a quarter-of-a-million visitors to the 1951 N. C. State Fair to be held in Raleigh, October 16-20, according to Dr. J. S. Dorton, the fair manager. This includes construction on the mammoth livestock judging arena and exhibition hall which is the center of the $2,000,000 expansion program at the fairgrounds, plus many new program features planned for this year's fair.

The "Fair of Tomorrow" expansion program will not be complete until 1952, but one unit - a Youth Center to house rural boys and girls who show, judge and exhibit farm animals and other products at the fairgrounds - will be ready for use this year. "Side-walk contractors" will find construction on the ultra-modern, 9,500-seat arena an attraction.

New program features at the 1951 fair include: A cow milking contest between Governor W. Kerr Scott and Commissioner of Agriculture L. Y. Ballentine on Thursday afternoon. Both are prominent dairymen and they have challenged one another to a milking contest.

An accuracy bait-casting contest on Wednesday morning, and an exhibit of home-made arti-cial lures, will be new attractions designed to appeal to the multitude of fishermen in the State. Entries in these contests should be mailed or delivered in time to reach the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission, P. O. Box 2919, Raleigh, on or before October 12.

Special guests at the 1951 fair will include "Rural Newcomers to North Carolina" and veterans of the Korean war. The United Nations veterans need only to present discharge or furlough papers to gain admission at the gate and receive free tours of the grandstand and midway attractions.

The "Rural Newcomers" - farm families who have moved to North Carolina from another state or foreign country within the past 12 months - should write Dr. J. S. Dorton, State Fair, P. O. Box 1383, Raleigh for their tickets.

Plentiful Foods Listed For Month

Apples are first on the U. S. Department of Agriculture's plentiful foods list for the Southeast for October, the county home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service, reported this week.

The apple crop this year is estimated at 119 million bushels, and volume marketings during the month should keep generous supplies of apples in most Southern food stores.

Broilers and fryers are next on the October list, followed by turkeys, dry beans, cheese, skim milk products, fish filets, canned apples and applesauce, table grapes, processed citrus products, cabbage, onions, and honey.

The home agent said marketing of broilers and fryers in the coming month may average as much as a third above the same month last year. The turkey crop this year is a record high, and a large part of the crop will be marketed by the end of October.

Grapes are another record crop, with production of all classes estimated at about 3,166,000 tons. A heavy volume of table grapes is usually sent to market in October, and good supplies should be found in most food shops throughout the Southeast.

The cold war being waged by the Crusade for Freedom will help prevent a hot war.
