Support Your Boy Scouts

(Contributed)

The annual fund drive of the Boy Scouts of America is being conducted in Hoke County from October 1 through October 15 this year.

Today more than ever, due to the uncertainty of world conditions, the molding of our nation's youth is becoming paramount. It is the duty of each of us in Hoke County to see that our young people become good citizens, and we must lay the groundwork to that end.

Every family in Hoke County can take part in this drive, as no contribution is too small.

The local committee is mailing to each family a letter setting forth their aims, together with a return envelope in which donations may be placed.

Be an individualist—let the dictates of your conscience guide your contribution. Let us build the bodies and minds of these young boys, so that at some future date we may all have a part in this everlasting work that is being done to build a better and more understanding America.

Poole's Medley

BY D. SCOTT POOLE

For the first time a colored man has served as Janitor of the Court House and grounds in Raeford. But he takes time out to butcher hogs and cows.

General Sherman stopped for two days and lodged in Bethel Presbyterian Church. He scribbled a Text for the preacher to preach from.

More men have served as Register of Deeds than in any other office in our county. Seven have filled this office in Hoke.

Do you remember the broad Main Street in Raeford before the maple trees were cut down? These were very pretty.

I do not see how we can escape getting into a war. Those heathens are pressing their cause, and charging falsely about certain contrabanding.

It is almost an impossibility to deal with ignorant heathen people. But we should deal honestly with them, and I believe we are.

It is noticeable that the long-leaf pines up in Moore County look a lot better than the few we have trying to live in these parts.

This column has stated more than once that singing is as meaningful and essential to Christian worship as prayer. And "prayer was appointed to convey the blessings God designed to give. Long as they live should Christians pray, for only while they pray, they live."

True, all prayers are not sincere, and are merely beating the air, but everybody should be in earnest and sing and pray to their soul's delight.

At Bethesda Homecoming Sunday I saw Will Pleasants for the first time since he pitched for Raeford against Laurinburg about forty years ago. I saw many others also, among them Walking Billy Covington of Rockingham.

Uncle Jake Clark, colored, averaged 200 rails a day, and I never knew him to fail. He was not a strong man, but was a judge of timber.

I remember attending a meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery at Bethesda Church in September 1872. I do not suppose there was another in the crowd Sunday who was there in 1872.

But descendants of those good people were there Sunday. In fact, nearly a thousand of them.

At midday that crowd surrounded long tables and ate a delicious and plentiful dinner. I was reminded of the boy and his two loaves and two small fishes.

I have no idea why the statesmen of our great country did nothing about "sound money", and in the middle 1880's, President Grover Cleveland began an insistent battle for the adoption of the gold standard.

I cast my first vote in 1880, and I have voted only for the Democratic Party, but as a paper dollar or a silver dollar each brought as much rations as a gold dollar, I could see but little advantage to the welfare of man in the gold standard.

The Bible gives the best standards by which we may safely go. Do unto others as you would wish them to do unto you. That is a very satisfactory rule of action.

Since I have been old enough to understand, I think the deficiency in the circulating medium known as money has caused distress in the lives of a great majority of the people. Prices of all commodities and ages have been ruinously against common sense and a good living.

YOU and YOUR .CONGRESS

This Session of Congress has featured a good deal more talk than action about federal economy. There is nothing particularly unusual about that.

However, there has been more talk about economy in this session of Congress than usual.

One reason is that this Congress has approved spending at a rate higher than any ever previously known in the country's peacetime history.

This has caused considerable concern among those members who really worry about the future of the country's economy. But most of the increased spending is for military or related purposes and, not being military expenses, those members who would like to effect possible economies find themselves equipped to do little except talk about it.

Another reason for the greater than usual amount of talk about economy is that members of the House got a vacation last month and had an opportunity to get back home and find out what the people are thinking about Congress.

A number of them report that many of their constituents are beginning to associate the forthcoming tax increase with the sharp rise in federal spending. That sort of public feeling is apt to make a man who depends on votes for a living nervous. But, with both the tax rise and spending increase now practically a matter of record, about all he can do at this point is talk about the need for more government economy.

When the books of this Congressional session are closed as scheduled next month, it will be seen that Congress succeeded only slightly in reducing the total budget requests of the various government departments for the current fiscal year.

Moreover, some of the training almost certainly will be nullified by the granting of supplemental or extra appropriations before the fiscal year ends next June 30. If that doesn't happen, it will be the first time in many years.

While its use sometimes is necessary for special reasons, the supplemental appropriation also is a handy device for appearing to economize but not actually doing so.

Generally speaking, the public isn't aware or loses sight of that. Neither does it realize that much of the federal budget each year is for spending which Congress has authorized in previous years.

For example, Congress passes a law authorizing the construction of a dam which will cost, say, $250 million. But it does not appropriate $250 million for the dam the year that the authorization law is passed, because the work that will be done on the dam that first year will cost only, say, $4 million. So it appropriates $4 million the first year and then, during subsequent years, other appropriations must be made to progressively pay off the balance of $246 million on that dam-or, which is highly unlikely, work on the dam must be stopped by repeal of that original authorization law.

What if Congress was required to appropriate the entire $250 million for the dam that first year?

Chairman Cannon (D-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee believes that in such case Congress probably would be inclined to approve less new dams and other long-range spending projects.

Rep. Taber (R-N.Y.), top-ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, agrees. Congress should present the cost picture of a new project as large as it actually is, says Taber, "rather than in small doses."

Those taxpayers who, according to their members in Congress, are beginning to associate federal expenditures and taxes, may now be realizing that those "small doses" Taber speaks of finally add up to very large ones.

If such a feeling should become widespread, there may be less talk and more action in Congress regarding federal spending.

Millions will enroll in the Crusade for Freedom this year.
