Hints To Homemakers

When the leaves are gay with new-found splendor and pumpkins are ripe in fields of shocked corn it's time to plan for a harvest party with square dancing or a scavenger hunt as the entertainment for the evening.

For the buffet table use a pumpkin vase as the centerpiece—hollow out the pumpkin and fill with autumn flowers and leaves. Or make a haystack or cornstalk setting. Fashion a cone from stiff paper—cover it with fringed crepe paper in autumn shades. Add an orange crepe paper harvest of pumpkins. Use ingenuity, a little wire, cotton, and crepe and add two little farmers to the scene—one with a pitchfork of wire covered with crepe paper, the other sitting on top of the stack or just looking on.

These are just a few suggestions. Your local art supply store or library can furnish you with a variety of booklets on party decorations, games, etc.

You'll find entertaining easy if you have several large pitchers on hand so you won't have to scurry for refills. Pitchers make nice vases too. You'll find it easier to play the perfect hostess, if you have snack dishes, lots of ashtrays and a silent butler—Stepsaving trays, specially large ones—Coasters and generous ice buckets and drink gadgets.

Layers should have mash available all of the time in feeders that prevent waste of feed. Fresh mash should be added at least once a day. For every 100 hens there should be 15 feet of feeder that permits the birds to eat from both sides.

CHRISTMAS SEALS

control program is being carried out by the Robeson County Tuberculosis association which works in cooperation with the medical profession and the health department.

It is essential to continue the fight to combat and control TB because it is important to the health of every American as well as a demonstration of what a free people, working together in the democratic way, can accomplish for the common good.

Last year, more than 12 million families contributed to the annual Christmas Seal Sale. Nobody forced them to give. They did so as free people—voluntarily.

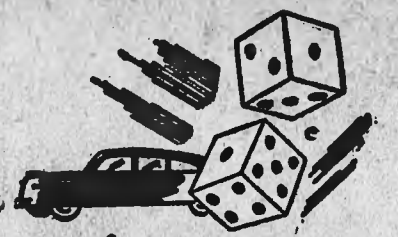

This year, Americans everywhere are again asked to join hands in support of this annual campaign to keep our nation strong and healthy. Every civic-minded and loyal American, appreciative of our way of life, as well as mindful of his own and his country's well-being, will want to be among those who help keep democracy in action by buying and using the traditional Christmas Seal.
