Cotton Insect Situation

In general, cotton is looking very good throughout the county. Plants are squaring heavily with the exception of late or replanted cotton and blooms are being found in a large number of fields. Recent rains have encouraged growth and fruiting during the past week.

The weekly survey of weevil infestations in different sections of the county on Monday of this week showed an increase in weevil activity over last week in fields that have not been treated. In the Wayside community, one field that was treated showed a 3% infestation while a plot in the same field that has been left untreated showed a 28% infestation. In the Antioch community, a treated plot showed 4% while the untreated area showed 6% infestation. In the Dundarrach community, the treated field shows 0% infestation and the untreated area 30% infestation. In the Bethel Charch vicinity, the untreated area showed 29% infestation, but due to bad weather counts were not made on the treated area.

Boll worm activity showed no increase this week over last week, but some fields have squares damaged by this pest. In fields where boll worm damage is noticed, DDT should be added to the insecticide that is being used if it doesn't already contain it. DDT is necessary in the insectidice to eccioal sich for warms

Boll weevil activity seems to be greater in some fields and worse in some spots of the fields. Growers are urged to check their fields for weevil damage. A good way to check a field is to walk across it and examine at least 100 or more squares from different areas in the field, looking at squares near the bottom, middle, and top of the stalks. If squaring has begun, applications should be applied in fields showing 10% punctured squares or less. It is suggested that applications be made at weekly intervals until infestations fall below 10%. This usually takes from 2 to 4 applications, which will continue early season control. It is suggested that the late season control be begun when infestations again build up to 10%.

Every cotton farmer knows that it takes a good set of bolls on the bottom part of a plant to make a good yield. With cotton squaring heavily now and weevil activity increasing, treatments now at regular intervals will help considerably in saving the bottom part of our cotton crop. Dusting in the late afternoon, night, or early morning when the air is calm assures you of a better job of poisoning. The next three to four weeks is important in making a good cotton crop. Check your fields regularly and treat as often as necessary to keep weevils under control.

B&PW Club Installs Officers Tuesday

On Tuesday evening of this week the Raeford Business and Professional Women's club met at the Elk Restaurant for their regular monthly dinner meeting, after which they adjourned to the Lions Den for a business meeting.
