People & Issues
By Cliff Blue

TEN YEARS AGO — Ten years ago Kerr Scott was in the Governor's mansion and just through with his first session of the General Assembly. Many people considered Scott unorthodox and sometimes reckless. But he was a man who had a program and knew how to get things done although he made many enemies through his outspoken statements and direct way of meeting issues. One time a group of Montgomery County people were up to see him and he reminded them that their representative, J. P. "Chalker" Wallace, was not going along well with his program. The delegation informed "Chalker" so he went in to see Governor Scott about it. "Chalker" told Governor Scott that he was voting for about 90 per cent of the Governor's program, most everything except the $200,000,000 rural road bond issue. Governor Scott told Wallace that "the bond issue is my program" and that it mattered more than all the other measures he had supported.

Ten years ago the Squire of Haw River was criticizing the Chamber of Commerce and the Civic Clubs, saying that when it came to doing "little peanut things" for the farmer they were all right, but that "they're not worth a damn when it comes to doing something really worthwhile for the country people." Many people thought the tobacco-chewing Governor was ruining himself with the people, but he went right on to winning the nomination and election to the United States Senate a couple of years after he gave up the Governor's office.

ASHLEY MURPHY — Few people in the House of Representatives can analyze a person in a more comical and down to earth way than Rep. Ashley Murphy of Pender County who is now serving his fourth term, and his second term as Chairman of the important Agricultural Committee. Ashley told a group of friends a few days ago about a man in his home community who made his acquaintance with the new minister in the community. The man was unaccustomed to praying in public, but since he was one of the few men who the new minister had met, he was called upon to lead in prayer, as he impressed the new parson as right much of a church man. Ashley says that the man got started praying, prayed for most everybody and was unable to bring it to a close, but finally concluded by saying, not "Amen," as most people do, but signed off saying, "Yours truly,"

"We have omitted the man's name, although Ashley says he can prove the story by a hundred people."
JACK KENNEDY — U. S. Senator John F. Kennedy sends personal letters to the delegates to the 1956 Democratic National Convention as often as possible, figuring that a goodly number may be delegates to the 1960 Convention to be held in Los Angeles. He writes the people about different issues, a recent one being about his "Kennedy-Ervin" labor bill. Of course, the young Senator has unlimited wealth and resources to carry on his letter-writing campaign and we suspect that he never sees the letters.

LEGISLATIVE VOTING — The old saying is that the best way for a politician to insure his re-election as a legislator is to vote for all appropriations and against all taxes. Well, it looked like quite a bit of this was going on in Raleigh during the past several days. Some of the leaders in the fight for greater school teachers' pay voted against most every revenue measure brought to a vote. This type representation may win elections back home, but it doesn't help a man with many of those who are familiar with legislative responsibility and what's going on.

CONSISTENCY — Rep. J. K. Doughton says that when he came to the General Assembly back in 1949 that he intended to try and be consistent on issues and in his voting but that it was not long before he gave up the idea of trying to be consistent. Who was it who said: "Consistency, thou are a jewel!"

BACK-TRACKING — The wet forces in the House did some quick back-tracking last week. On Thursday the P & G Committee gave a favorable report to a bill which would have permitted any municipality with a population of 2,000 or more to vote to establish liquor stores. When the rumor spread that an amendment had been prepared to tack on a state-wide referendum to the bill, Rep. Marcellus Buchan of Jackson County make a motion to send the bill back to committee where it is expected to die. The "wet" lobbyists have been less in evidence around this session of the General Assembly than during any session during the past dozen years.

LARKINS — Down in Jones County a few days ago John Larkins' friends gave him a big birthday party, the occasion being his 50th birthday with "Larkins for Governor" being the theme of the meeting. A county-wide committee headed by Rudolph Pelletier of Maysville sponsored the supper honoring the man who for some time has been running hard, unofficially, for the Democratic nomination for Governor. A good many people are giving his candidacy more serious consideration than they did some months ago.

Farm families suffered 7,500 fewer accidental deaths in 1957 than in 1947.
