Dogwood Day Scheduled For Raeford, Hoke County

Wednesday, March 6, is Dogwood Day in Raeford and Hoke County. It was so named by the Community Development Clubs official board.

Emphasis will be placed on the slogan, "Each One Plant One," and promoters have asked that every homeowner help to make the county more beautiful by planting a dogwood tree on Dogwood Day.

It is suggested that persons having woodland with young dogwoods share them with others in order to help with the beautification project. For those who do not have woodland, it is suggested that a friend who does have plenty be asked for one. Or better still, as many as is desired may be purchased from a nearby nursery. Nursery trees have been root-pruned and are more likely to live.

Among the early spring-flowering trees, the dogwood is regarded by many as unrivaled in attractiveness. While the tree often reaches 15 to 20 feet in height with a low, broad head and tiers of horizontal branches, it can also be trained to grow in the form of a shrub with many medium height limbs which spread branches broadly from the ground up.

The tree is generally known for its showy, white display in spring, nevertheless, there are also pink varieties. Then, there are the red berries and the orange, scarlet and crimson leaves in fall and winter which are equaled by only a few trees.

The dogwood tree grows best in light shade, but will tolerate full sun. It thrives best in moist, fertile, loam soil. The addition of leaf mold improves nearly all home garden soils for the dogwood.

After the tree has recovered from transplanting, growth can be stimulated by the same chemical fertilizers that are used on grass and other plants. But such feeding is not usually needed. Mulch or other coarse material keeps the soil moist near the surface where their roots are most active.

The young tree should be planted shallow, no deeper than they came out of the ground.

Farm Items

It has been known for some time that Urea could be absorbed through the leaves of plants. Research work has shown that this is true for tobacco. This work also shows that supplying nitrogen to tobacco plants through foliar sprays of Urea solutions is neither efficient, practical, nor economical.

Some work found that supplying nitrogen through Urea foliar spray to the leaf interferred with the uptake by the plant of bases, particularly calcium and magnesium, and the growth and development of the root system. This same effect occurs when the plant takes up sizable amounts of ammonium. In both cases, yield and quality of the leaf are lowered in proportion to the amount of Urea sprays used or ammonium absorbed.

In tests, it is interesting to note that in every case the foliar applied nitrogen gave a lower yield than the solid nitrate form applied to the soil and in two of the three cases, actually lower than where no additional nitrogen was supplied. Another very interesting point was that nitrogen applied to and left on top of the soil was more effective in increasing yield than when it was cultivated in. The quality tended to follow the yield. The leaf from plants which received the spray was dull in color or had an ashy finish.

In short, all the research results suggest that if a tobacco plant could speak, it would say to Mr. Farmer, "Feed My Feet."

There are two important bulletins that you home gardeners should have as a guide. The first is "Recommended Vegetable Varieties." Information from this will give you the newer varieties of each vegetable crop. It will tell you if you can freeze the products with good success and in what section of the state it grows best. The majority of these varieties have disease resistance to a number of the problems we have during the summer in gardens.

The second bulletin is the "Garden Mammal." This discusses location, plans, soil, fertilizers and weed control. This also gives you a table as a suggestion for planting to harvesting.

You may have one each by coming to the county agent's office in the federal building.

North Carolina Cattle Feeders Field Day will be held in the livestock arena in Clinton on March 7. Registration will begin at 9:30 a. m. Purpose of the field day is to study the "meat type steer" of today and how we can expect to produce the "meat type steer" of the future. It is important that we try to keep up with trends within the industry and this "meat type" trend is more than just a passing fancy.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend this field day to get first hand information of what we can expect in the future.

Program Is Stopped; No Money

The Family Service Corps of the Community Action Program will be terminated March 1, according to an announcement from Sandhills GAP office.

The program is being discontinued due to lack of funds for home management and homemaker type of program.

Three workers have been carrying on a program of home visitation and counseling with underprivileged families for the past year.

The Office of Economic Opportunity has begun cutting back on project funds from certain programs having low priority in order to continue national emphasis programs as earmarked by Congress, according to the announcement.

Sandhills Community College provided training in home economics for 16 persons as the program began. Working in conjunction with other agencies on a referral basis, FSC workers assisted in providing homemaker services, recruiting for adult education classes, agency referrals and information on services to nearly 8,000 persons since the program began.

NO FISHING TODAY--This scene may be a pretty one to grown-ups, but to boys in Dundarrach area, it looks better when the leaves begin to put out on the trees and corks are bobbing in the water. Believe it or not, fishing time is just around the corner.

Local Business

Motel operators say that three-fourths of their registrants can not remember their automobile license numbers. This is true even though the drivers see their tags dozens of times daily, month after month.

The strange quirk of the human mind to reject information which it does not need to hold explains much about the effectiveness of various kinds of advertising. It explains why newspaper advertising is so essential to successful retailing.

Many people can not remember phone numbers which they call daily. Some can not remember their own phone numbers. Most of us can not remember the time, or even the day, of a television program which we watch every week. In fact, normal people would lose some screws if they attempted to remember the thousands of details directional to modern living. The communication medium which expects such memory is expecting the impossible.

Perhaps visual and sound advertising has an effect on the unconscious. Perhaps people unconsciously buy a product or go to a store because of something that was heard or seen in a fleeting moment. On the other hand, perhaps they don't.

The unconscious or subconscious mind just doesn't come through when we try to remember names we have heard repeatedly, or the site of a store which is selling brand X at a bargain, or cost of groceries read off hurriedly.

The truth is that buying, especially important buying is done coldly and rationally. It is done with the use of reference information. It is done with the use of reference information. It is done with the use of reference information. It is done with the use of reference information.
