

Sandhills College News

Sandhills Community College will offer an Industrial Management Institute for small manufacturers which is designed to help them increase their understanding and handling of all phases of management.

In announcing the plans for the Institute Henry I. Rahn, director of technical-vocational education at Sandhills, explained that meetings would be held Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning Monday February 2

CARD OF THANKS

May we extend our heartfelt thanks to those of you who expressed your sympathy in so many thoughtful ways during our recent bereavement. Your kindnesses have meant much to us. The Family of Sim Lewis, 36P and continuing for ten weeks. All sessions will be held in Room 202 of the Administrative Building on the Sandhills campus.

The Institute will cover such topics as personnel practices, company policies, record keeping, profit control, flexible budgets, bookkeeping and billing, financial records, purchase and inventory, warehousing and other allied subjects.

The Institute will be conducted by Mark Jay King Jr., management consultant of Southern Pines who serves some 250 clients from the Atlantic seaboard to Oklahoma. He has been retained to make surveys of and brochures for area wide industrial and commercial developments and for the past 5 years has been a volunteer consultant in the SCORE program of the Small Business Administration.

The registration fee for the Institute is $10 and persons interested in enrolling should write or phone Mr. Rahn at Sandhills Community College.

Garden Time

By M. E. Gardner

Spices! spices! Every housewife uses them in the preparation of many tasty dishes. Too, they come in such attractive small glass jars to be displayed in special wooden racks. But I wonder if many housewives realize the extent of the industry as far as imported products are concerned. I ran across some rather interesting figures which I am passing along to my readers as a matter of general interest.

Many of our spices are imported from the tropics. In 1968, the money value of imports was $37 million, ranging from small quantities of Spanish saffron, at $90 to $100 per pound, to staggering amounts of pepper. Over 53 million pounds of pepper were imported in 1968 which would provide about one-fourth pound for every man, woman and child in the United States. Excluding "Tunisians and Moroccans, Americans are the largest users of pepper in the world." This was quite surprising to me because I rarely add pepper to prepared food.

Other important spices are: allspice, 1 million pounds; cardamon, 117,700 pounds; cassia, 9 million; cinnamon, 5 million; clover, 4 million; ginger, 3.5 million; nutmeg, 4 million; tumeric, 3.5 million; vanilla beans, over 2 million; and curry powder 60,500 pounds.

Ever since Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring", pesticides have been in trouble especially the chlorinated hydrocarbons, such as DDT. Extension agents and specialists are dropping 12 of the 18 recommended uses of DDT. Less usage is also being recommended for other chlorinated hydrocarbons - aldrin, dieldrin and endrin.

Under the new set of recommendations, entomologists suggest that DDT be used only for the control of bollworms and bollweevils on cotton; thrips, plant bugs and earworms on commercial flowers and shrubs; gall midge and corn earworms in greenhouses; pine tip moths on shade trees; and weevils in sweet potatoes.

It is recommended that aldrin be used only for billbugs and wireworms on corn; soil insects in commercial turf; pale's weevil on commercial trees; and termites. Dieldrin is restricted to the control of weevils in sweet potatoes and plant bugs on apple trees.

Recommendations for endrin are being restricted to the control of mice in apple orchards.
