Hoke Homemakers Attend Consumerama '70 Wed.

Members of the extension homemaker's clubs in Hoke County left by chartered bus Wednesday morning to attend the opening Wednesday of Consumerama '70 in Winston Salem.

Consumerama '70 is a five-day exposition designed to help consumers get what they pay for in the supermarket, the dress shop and, especially, the appliance and furniture stores.

It is being sponsored by Forsyth County's Extension Homemakers Association and is being held in Winston Salem's new multi-million dollar Convention Center.

The Hoke County group were to attend a business meeting of the Southwestern District where Mrs. Allan Smythe was to be recognized as district vice chairman of the family life committee and Mrs. F. W. Jones was to be recognized as the 1971-72 alternate chairman of the beautification committee.

Mrs. Dennis Setzer of Lenoir County presided at the meeting of approximately 800 women from the 17 North Carolina counties that make up the district.

After the business meeting, the homemakers were to attend a fashion show until lunch. Later they were scheduled to see a show sponsored by Celanese on fashions in clothing and home furnishings and to tour the exhibit until time to return to Raeford by bus.

Some of the exhibits are featuring new products and others, old standbys. All concentrate, however, on advising rather than advertising.

Speakers during the expositions will include Leslie Dix, the Federal Trade Commission's assistant director of deceptive practices; Richard Maxwell, national president of Better Business Bureau; Robert Morgan, attorney general of North Carolina and William C. Griffin, associate director of product development for Atlas Chemical Company who will answer questions on food additives.

Suggestions will be given at the exposition for stretching the meat dollar, for making lingerie at home, for selecting furniture that will survive children and for buying everything from a dress that won't shrink to a mobile home.

The exhibits will be open from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Tickets to the events are being sold by extension homemakers.
