State May Take Over All Welfare Costs

North Carolina's 100 counties may find a solution to their financial problems by getting out of the welfare business if a study to be conducted of the State taking over the administration and financing of these programs proves feasible to the next session at the General Assembly.

Such a study was authorized Wednesday at the meeting of the State Board of Social Services in Raleigh.

Robert L. Lyday, a member of the Board from Bryson City, on a motion that was unanimously approved by the Board proposed that a study be made to determine the feasibility of the State taking over the complete financing and administration of the social services program in North Carolina.

Lyday stated he had met with various county commissioners from the western part of the State and that they stated rising welfare costs were creating a financial crisis in their counties.

Under the present system the State and counties share the non-Federal share of the program. When the General Assembly approves the total welfare budget, it makes the county's share of the funds mandatory.

The only real source of income for counties is the ad valorem property tax which has limitations.

Commissioner of Social Services Clifton M. Craig told the Board that 36 States already have a state administered welfare system and the Virginia legislature just recently voted to change their system. He also stated that some counties have already run out of welfare money for this year and are faced with a significant budget increase for the next year.

Under a state system the state would maintain offices throughout the state to provide social services and financial aid to its citizens. This would relieve the counties of all financial responsibility in maintaining its present county departments of social services

Army To Train U.S. Air Force Helicopter Pilots

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The Army will begin helicopter flight training for the Air Force starting in October, the Department of Defense has announced.

The training program will be conducted at Ft. Wolters, Tex., and Ft. Rucker, Ala., the two major Army helicopter training centers.

Approximately 225 helicopter pilots will be trained annually by the Army plus a certain number of currently rated fixed-wing pilots. All students will be Air Force officers.

Impetus for the new training arrangement stems from a recommendation by the House Appropriations Committee.

The VA says permanently and totally disabled veterans are eligible for grants up to $12,500 for the construction, remodeling or adaptation of homes.

Army Seeks FAS Program Applicants

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The Army is seeking officer applicants, particularly captains, for its expanding Foreign Area Specialty (FAS) Program.

Upon obtaining a masters degree and developing area expertise in one of 24 foreign areas, FAS graduates are used to fill positions requiring officers who are skilled in military matters and trained in the cultural and environmental aspects of a particular geographical area and its people.

FAS Program members specialize in a particular foreign area. The two and one-half to four-year training program is conducted in three phases at the post-graduate level. These phases include language training at the Defense Language Institute; on-campus academic studies in history, geography, economics, politics and sociology for a masters degree; and area orientation training in the country or area of specialization.

Officers interested in the FAS Program should consult Army Regulation 614-142 for instructions.
