

More TLC Recommended For Power Lawn Mower

Much neglect of the power lawnmower is due to the fact that the engine is the most important and requires the greatest care. Frequent changes of oil is one of the first considerations, according to extension agricultural engineers at North Carolina State University.

Most small engine manufacturers recommend changing oil at 25-hour (time in use) intervals. However, lawn mower life can be extended by even more frequent changes, the engineers suggest.

A good quality detergent oil, normally of 30 weight, is recommended. When the oil change is made, it is desirable to have the engine hot, since more of the contaminants can be drained from a hot engine.

More engines are damaged from lack of oil than any other single neglect. The oil level should be checked frequently, the engineers warn.

The air cleaner is another important item and a frequent source of trouble - again, due to neglect. In cases of oil bath type cleaners, they should be serviced each time the oil is changed. Paper type oil filters should be changed at least once each season and more often in cases of extensive use.

Lawn mowers operate with air cooled engines, generally. To assure proper cooling, the shrouding should be removed occasionally and the cooling fins cleared of trash sucked in by the air stream.

Non-leaded or white gas is regarded as the best fuel for small air-cooled engines. This will reduce lead deposits in the engine and valve and extend spark plug life.

Other suggestions: Check occasionally for loose bolts or cracked or broken parts. Wheel bearings should be greased with either good oil or by removing the wheels and packing with bearing lubricant. Keep the mower cleaned of grass deposits to prevent rust and deterioration and to allow proper discharge of cuttings from the rotating blade.

The cutting blade should be a single piece of good quality steel. It should be fastened securely to the shaft with a lock nut or other device. It should be sharpened frequently. The blade should be correctly balanced to avoid damaging vibrations.

A little more of this kind of TLC can extend the life of the mower and perhaps make the life of the operator slightly less frustrating.

Season Set For Birds

The Wildlife Resources Commission has announced dates and bag limits for doves, marsh hens, woodcock, and Wilson's snipe for the coming seasons. The Commission was given the usual framework of dates from which to select the seasons on these species, but the bag limits were set by the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

First shooting gets under way September 1 when the season on marsh hens opens one-half hour before sunrise. These come in for a 70-day season ending November 9 at sunset. Bag limits are 15 daily and 30 in possession for clapper and king rails, singly or in combination; 25 daily and 25 in possession for sora and Virginia rails, singly or collectively; and 15 daily and 30 in possession for gallinules. Shooting hours for marsh hens are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Next in line is the dove season set to open at noon on September 2 with the first segment of a split season to close October 10, and the second season to run from December 16 to January 15. Again there will be a daily bag of 18 birds with 36 allowed in possession. Shooting hours are from noon to sunset.

Copies of the official regulations on the above species will be available at post offices by late August. As indicated by the length of seasons and the liberal bag limits, birds should be generally plentiful this year.

Wilson's snipe season will open November 14 and end January 16 and the woodcock season will open December 11 and end February 13, with shooting hours from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. Bag limits for woodcock are 5 daily, 10 in possession, and for snipe 8 daily and 16 in possession. Woodcock hunters are requested to forward their names and addresses to the Wildlife Commission, P.O. Box 2919, Raleigh, 27602, so that a survey of woodcock hunters and hunting can be made this fall by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.
