Task Group On Volunteer Army Formed

WASHINGTON (ANF) -The Army has formed a task group to evaluate ideas and implement steps designed to increase service attractiveness and thereby enable the Army to move toward an allvolunteer force.

Called the All-Volunteer Army Task Group, the 16man group is working under Lt. Gen. Walter T. Kerwin Jr., the Army's deputy chief staff for personnel. In evaluating ways and means by which service attractiveness can be improved, the group will consider suggestions to eliminate irritants which may discourage some young men and women from

As a result of past Army efforts in this area, the task group has a good start in that it already has a list of more than 300 recommendations. These range from suggestions for more efficient induction procedures to the possible elimination of KP.
