Weekly Health Tip
From Walter Cowy, M.D.

Most anyone can benefit from the diet recommended for athletes, which includes the "basic four": four glasses of milk (skim for dieters); three or more servings of protein foods (meat, fish, poultry, eggs, cottage cheese); five or more servings of fruits and vegetables; four or more servings of whole-grain breads or cereals. Nothing is more important than a well-balanced diet for good health and resistance to disease.

Police Report Three Wrecks

Three wrecks were reported in the city this week by city police.
Two accidents occurred within 35 minutes Saturday morning. The first took place on South Main Street at 10:50 a.m. A car driven by Will Pope, 84, of Rt. 1 Raeford, was struck on the left fender by an auto driven by Herbert Hoover Locklear, 41, of Rt. 1 Pembroke.
Pope was attempting to turn into the A&P parking lot when he crossed in front of Locklear's car, city policeman Leonard Wiggins said. No charges were made.
The second accident occurred at 11:25 Saturday morning at the intersection of Elwood Avenue and Stewart Street.
Irene Kearns, 20, of Rt. 3 Raeford, was attempting a left turn from Elwood south onto Stewart when her car struck a vehicle driven by William Wallace McLean, 72, of Raeford.

Mrs. Kearns was charged with failing to yield right of way.

The third wreck occurred Monday evening at 7:15 when a car driven by Beverly Gail Hollingsworth, 16, of Rt. 2, Raeford struck a parked car on Main Street in front of the Baptist Church.

According to police, Miss Hollingsworth swerved to avoid hitting a car that pulled in front of her vehicle and struck the parked car belonging to C.D. Bounds.
No charges were placed.

West Quits Police Force

Jim West, city policeman, has resigned from the Raeford police force effective Nov. 1. Police Chief L.W. Stanton announced this week.
West had been a member of the force since 1966. He was employed by the city as a radio operator for a year before joining the police department as a patrolman.

Man Charged In Shoplifting

An arrest was made Monday on a shoplifting charge.
Earnest Young, 66, of Raeford, is charged with taking a bottle of wine from City Market. Bond was set at $75 pending trial Friday in District Court.

McCain Director Receives Award

Wilbur J. Steinger, M.D., medical director of the North Carolina Sanatorium in McCain, North Carolina, and former assistant medical director of the Maybury Tuberculosis Sanatorium in Northville, Michigan, received the 1970 Bruce H. Douglas Award at a joint luncheon meeting of the Michigan Thoracic Society and the Michigan Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association held Oct. 22 at the Northland Inn, Southfield, Michigan.

The Bruce H. Douglas Award, named for a former director of tuberculosis control for Detroit, is presented annually by the Michigan Thoracic Society to recognize an individual who has made an outstanding contribution in the field of tuberculosis treatment and control. The Award was presented to Dr. Steinger by W.L. Howard, M.D., director of Northshore Hospital, Muskegon, and former director of Maybury Sanatorium.

Dr. Steinger is a former president of the Michigan Thoracic Society and holds memberships with the American Thoracic Society, North Carolina Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, North Carolina State, District and County Medical Societies and the North Carolina Thoracic Society. He is also a Consultant on Tuberculosis to the United States Public Health Service.

He was born in Detroit, the son of a Methodist minister, and the family lived in Owosso, Adrian, Flint and Saginaw before returning to Detroit where Dr. Steinger graduated from Central High School and subsequently received his pre-medical and medical training at Wayne State University.

A personal bout with tuberculosis stimulated his interest in the disease and in 1948 he joined the medical staff at Maybury Sanatorium where he advanced to associate director.

Dr. Steinger is the co-author of 13 scientific articles in the pulmonary disease field.

He is married to the former Alta Doris Fox.

HONORED - Dr. Wilbur J. Steinger, medical director of the N.C. Sanatorium at McCain, received the 1970 Bruce H. ## Hoke ASCS News

By THOMAS R. BURGESS

At the opening session of the International Cotton Advisory Committee in Washington, D.C., in mid-October, Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin underlined the importance of cotton to farm livelihood in this country, according to H.O. Carter, for the Agricultural Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Believing that Secretary Hardin's remarks on the cotton industry will be of interest to cotton growers and others associated with the industry, Mr. Carter provided the following excerpts from Mr. Hardin's speech:

"While cotton may not bulk as large in total U.S. agricultural production as in some countries, cotton is just as important to farm livelihood and to regional economies in the United States as it is in other sections of the world."

"Cotton is an important crop in 12 of our 50 States. In four of them it provides one-fourth or more of total receipts from the marketing of farm crops."

"In the central part of our cotton belt - where 60 percent of the crop is produced - one-third of the crop production work force is employed in cotton."

"The estimated investment in the U.S. cotton industry - in land, machinery, equipment, supplies - is in the neighborhood of $20 billion."

"So it is natural - and proper - that the United States is concerned about the cotton farmer and his ability to make a living - just as every other cotton-growing country represented on this committee."

"We are concerned that cotton has been in trouble and continues to be in trouble - worldwide as well as in the United States. We all know that cotton is not sharing in the impressive growth of the textile market."

"The hard fact is that cotton's share of this expanding market has dropped from 65 percent to less than 50 percent in the recent past."

"It is unrealistic, I think, to expect that cotton can ever match the huge sums spent by man-made on research and promotion. But it is realistic to expect that by working together, with wise use of the resources available, and with a sharing of problems and burdens, the cotton family can reduce the widening gap between synthetics and cotton, on which so many millions depend for a living...."

"Price, of course, is a crucial factor - not only in the market place, where it largely determines sales, but in the cotton field, where the farmer must meet his expenses and feed his family with the return he gets from his farming operation."

"This means that supplies must be balanced to provide the producer with a fair return for his cotton at a price that will move it on the markets of the world. This is no easy challenge, as all of us here can testify."

"From the producer's standpoint, world cotton prices the last year or two have not been attractive, although the recent upturn has improved the situation. However, with competition from man-made fibers, there is no future for cotton at a high price - either in the short run or the long run. Cotton pays a penalty for high prices in shifts to man-made - markets do not seem to come back no matter what the subsequent price."

"This suggests to me that the future of cotton, while it depends on research and promotion, yes, depends even more on the ability of the producing countries to shift their thinking from gross production to efficient low cost production."

"The key question should be: How can we have a prosperous domestic cotton economy at prices that are competitive the world over?"

"You will be discussing these and other problems this week, and next. The United States is pleased to participate once again, because we intend to continue to produce cotton, and to continue to work within the cotton family as a reliable producer for world markets."
