Service Stations To Pump Unleaded and Low-Lead Gas

DALLAS, Tex. (ANF) — Service stations operated by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) throughout the continental United States will have the capability to dispense unleaded or low-lead gasolines by July 1, 1971, according to Maj. Gen. William B. Campbell, chief of AAFES. The action is being taken to support the national program directed against environmental pollutants. AAFES is undertaking an eight-month construction and modification program to install the underground storage tanks, piping and pumps necessary for dispensing the new gasolines. First availability of the unleaded gasoline is expected to be in the Southeastern United States in November.

House Large Family At A Moderate Cost

Persons with a large family and a modest income need not give up the idea of owning a house that will meet their needs.

A house plan that could accommodate up to a dozen family members is available from the Hoke County Agricultural Extension office. The house features plenty of storage space, two full baths, kitchen with laundry area, living room, three bedrooms and a large dormitory-style bedroom.

The work area — L shaped kitchen and laundry — are readily accessible to the outside. The additional storage area on the back of the house can be used for water heater, freezer, canned food, and lawn equipment.

Other storage areas include: bedroom closets, linen closet, and coat closet near the living room entrance.

The house contains 1,360 square feet.

Complete working drawings of the plan are available from the county extension office or from Biological and Agricultural Engineering Extension at North Carolina State University.

The plan was developed by the Extension Housing Specialist, N.C. State University, as part of Extension's effort to help families meet their housing needs.
