

Draft Call Rate Down; Now 10,000 Per Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Defense has requested a total of 20,000 inductees from the Selective Service System for the months of May and June.

All of these inductees will be assigned to the Army.

The draft call for May was previously announced at 16,000.

According to DOD, "Progress in Vietnam redeployment plan, announced by the President on April 7, has made it possible to combine the May and June calls into one for a total of 20,000."

Draft calls for January through April 1971 have been 17,000 each month.

Some cynics are fond of saying that conservationists are full of grandiose ideas on how to stop pollution, but short on effective plans and solutions. Of course, these cynics invariably have neither grandiose plans nor solutions — and in fact are too selfish or stupid to even recognize the problem.

Water pollution is one of the biggest problems facing this nation in the century. And yet, only a handful of people seem to understand the common-sense steps that are necessary if we are to clean up our polluted waters. Dr. Lois Sharpe, an environmentalist with the League of Women's Voters, spoke recently at the Fontana Conservation Roundup.

She understands the problem, and best of all, she offers a seven-part solution.

(1) "If we assume that no one has the right to pollute, then the cost of waste management must be part of the normal cost of doing business, even if this means fewer products at increased cost."

(2) "Industry must consider changing its processes of manufacture in order to produce less pollution, instead of merely looking for improved waste treatment processes."

(3) "Everyone who uses a sewage disposal plant should be charged user fees on a fair share basis. Each home should be assessed fairly, and each industry. Charges should be reflected in both the quantity of waste disposed and how difficult it is to treat."

(4) "Some industries now threaten to move to other states if pollution laws are tightened. No state will be free from this threat until all states have strict pollution regulations."

(5) "Profit motives should be applied to industries who pollute. In Vermont, a new law permits the state to charge industries for authorized discharges which reduce water quality downstream. Not only are the fees paid by industry an incentive for them to improve their waste treatment, but these fees are used by the state to further improve water quality."

(6) "It is time we stopped thinking of re-used water as distasteful. We must use our water, recycle it, and use it again and again. This must apply not only to industry, but also for domestic and recreational uses."

(7) "We must adopt a more realistic pricing system for the use of water. At present, those who use the most water are being charged the least, proportionately. Water prices should encourage less use, and those who use the most water should be charged the highest fees."

(News items this week from Johnston, Columbus, Rockingham and Pasquotank counties.)

You don't need a lot of fancy pans in order to cook foods that you want and need. For Expanded Nutrition Program Aides are working with families that are interested in trying new recipes, even if they don't have the "proper" pots and pans to cook them in.

Mrs. Trudy Benson, a Johnston County aide, has a homemaker in the program that had always dreamed of baking a lemon supreme cake.

— Since she did not own a tube pan, the homemaker decided to substitute her fry pan. The cake turned out beautifully. "The homemaker was pleased and her family enjoyed the cake," Dorothy Johnson, associate home economics extension agent, relates.

Mrs. Emma Haynes, Whiteville, Rt. 1, believes in using what she has to decorate her new house.

Mrs. Haynes, and her husband, both senior citizens, recently refinished a chest for use in their house, built by Extension house plan 90.

The Haynes' children thought their parents should buy new furniture; that is, until they saw the chest, Mrs. Elaine Blake, home economics extension agent, Columbus County says.

Do - it - yourself kitchen cabinet construction has caught on with several Rockingham County ladies.

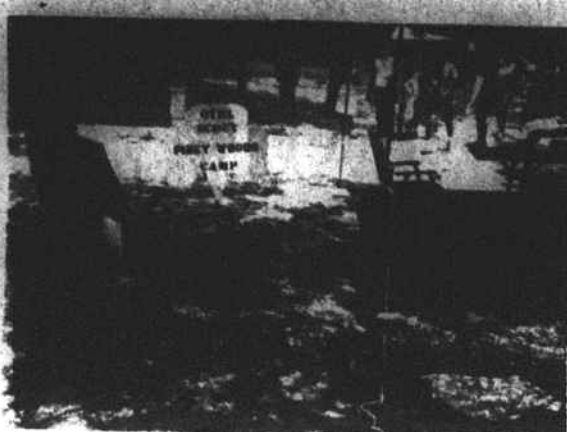

One such homemaker, Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Eden, Rt. 1, has made three floor and two wall cabinets from "chip wood," which she later painted and finished as she wished.

Mrs. Taylor told Mrs. Zadie Jackson, home economics extension agent, "My dream kitchen is being realized."

She added, "I want to thank Extension and others for showing me the way to better kitchen storage at low cost."

AWARD — Mrs. Mary Ann Scott, one of the speech and hearing therapists for Hoke County Schools, has been selected by the Awards Committee of N.C. Department of Public Instruction as a recipient of a summer session traineeship under Public Law 91-230, Education of the Handicapped Act, Part D. Mrs. Scott will attend Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, N.C. July 19 - August 20. Mrs. Scott is a 1965 graduate of Fayetteville State University. She resides at 194 Grove View Terrace in Fayetteville while her husband is with the U.S. Army, stationed in Vietnam.
