Around Town

by SAM C. MORRIS

Mrs. Mamie Bevan, nee Mamie McFadyen of Montrose, sent us a receipthis week that was received on December 4, 1893 from the Cumberland County tax department.

The receipt is as follows: Received of J. J. McFayden his taxes for this year 1893, as follows:
For State Tax $3.05
For County Tax $2.33
For Bridge Tax 67

J.B. Smith, Sheriff Per E.E.G.-D.S.

According to Mrs. Bevan the receipt was on 110 acres of land that had a six-room house on the land. She also said that her father took a three hundred pound bale of cotton to Fayetteville that year and received 5 cents per pound for it. We can see why the tax rate was so

We want to thank Mrs. Bevan for their old receipt and information. If anyone knows what Bridge Tax is, please inform the writer.

School gets out Friday for two weeks and many small kids will be playing near and on the streets of the city, so please drive carefully so that Santa Claus will be in every home in Hoke County this

We will again remind clubs and individuals who will be helping the needy families of the county to please clear them through the Department of Social Services. In this way one family will not receive aid from two or three different sources. Miss Mable McDonald, director, said that families should be requested by Monday, December 20. So if you intend to aid a needy family, go by the department and we feel sure almost everyone will have a very happy Christmas in Hoke County.

The following essay was received by Mrs. Helen Butler from her husband, Sp/4 William, R. Qutle, who is stationed in tetnam.

Christmas In Vitenam

As Christmas draws near, people's spirits rise to the occasion. But somewhere in Southeastern Asia there will be many Americans who will feel no different. These Americans are in the Armed Forces. In Vietnam alone, approximately 150,000 men will spend Christmas Day as if it were just another day in the year.

day in the year.

Of dopine there will be jots of green things around - trucks, clothes, blankets, flight jackets, and such - but no red or yellow and other Christmasy colors. No wives to share this special occasion with. No woods to hunt in (except jungles full of VC). No tasty dinners. No cars to go riding around town in to see all the pretty decorations. No stores with poles and decorations. No stores with colors and displays. No music in the streets. No one telling you "Merry Christmas" or Happy New Year." Nobody wants to lie, Nobody would believe it anyway. No fragrant firs or spruce. No blinking lights. No fancy gifts. No fresh cakes or roasted turkey. No love exercit 9.00 miles want. No love except 9,000 miles away. No jolly men in red suits, only frowning Reds. No Christmas cheer except a bottle of bourbon from the PX. No halls decked with holly. No mistletoe. No one to kiss anyway.

Going hunting with an M-16 instead of a 12 gauge. Driving a tank instead of a hay wagon. Convoys Instead of parades. 122mm rockets and grenades instead of firecrackers and bottle filers. Camouflaged uniforms instead of bright sweaters and ski caps. Knee - deep mud instead of snow, Doesn't sound too much instead of snow, Doesn't sound too much like Christmas, does it?

Why should ahyone exchange New Year's Greeting, when they don't know what the new year will be like for us? At this very moment, Pakistan and India are waging a full - scale war. Will that be our next place to be sent?

Just another GI. SP/4 William R. Butler From this essay you can see that we all have many, things to be thankful for at

Havelock High School officials were reprimanded Thursday for unsportsmanlike and unprofessional conduct by the board of controls of the North Carolina High School Athletics

The reprimand stemmed from charges made by Raz Autry, principal at Hoke High, over the site of the Southeastern 3-A and Eastern 3A football playoff game between Hoke and Havelock.

The playing field was changed to New Bern by Simon Terrell, NCHS Athletic Association after Autry professed the facilities at Havelock, but the site was returned to Havelock after Terrell was overruled by members, of the executive

County Law Requires Homes Sewage Permit county commissioners have adopted an ordinance that requires approval of a sewage disposal system for all new dwoflings or businesses before the electricity can be connected.

The ordinance was approved by the board at the last meeting Dec. 6 but was omitted from the newspaper story last

Under the new regulation, the sewage disposal system must be approved by the county sanitarian and a permit issued before final approval by the electrical inspector can be given.

The board of control accepted the recommendation of the penalties committee that the Havelock school officials be rebuked on two charges: that they refused to meet with Hoke High representatives to work out the details of the game as stated in the NCHS - AA handbook and that they failed to provide the number of seats promised for the administration has ever been reprimanded for unsportsmanlike and unprofessional Included are all dwellings, places of business, entertainment, recreation, food establishment and any other building that requires sanitary facilities under state law. M. R. Mills, sanitarian, told the commissioners that the law was needed to help regulate the sale of shell homes in the country that are being sold without sewage disposal systems.

Many times the buyer purchases the shell homes using all his financial reserves without giving any thought to putting in a sewage disposal system, Mills said. He told the commissioners that it was against the state law to sell these places without some kind of bathroom or privy, but that usually the house was already erected before he knew about it. Then he had no choice but to require the buyer to erect a sewage disposal system, Mills said. He said he hoped the ordinance would help stop the sale of homes without bathroom

An ordinance requiring a sewage disposal permit before electrical service could be supplied to house trailers has been in effect in the county for several

The twin - engine Beechraft Baron, owned by Greensboro - High Point Air Service Co. crashed in a wooded area about a mile from the airport. According to reports from persons who saw the crash, the accident appeared to have been caused by some combination of mechanical failure and weather conditions. The plane struck trees were conditions. The plane struck trees and crashed into the ground about 25 feet from a Charlotte home, bursting into flames on impact.

Bernard C. | Groseclose, Federal Aviation Administration tower chief at Charlotte said the plane was making an instrument landing from the southwest shortly before 9 a.m. and was just short of the runway when the pilot radioed the tower that he was not going to land and was going instead to Gastonia.

Groseclose said another plane in the area radioed that the Beechcraft made a hard left turn and another plane radioed that the turning plane seemed to be having trouble with its left engine Groseclose said a check at the crash site showed the left engine "feather." the propeller turned to prevent wind urage. Mrs. Martha Cusick, a resident in the area who saw the plane crash, said that the plane seemed to touch the tops of the pinetrees in her yard as it spiralled wing over wing toward the ground. The plane crashed about 150 yards from her house in a neighbor's yard. Mrs. Cusick said she ard an explosion as she was inside calling a volunteer fire department to the Groseclose said that the heavy fog at the airport had cleared somewhat, with visibility of from 4,500 to 6,000 feet exceeding the minimums. A fog bank obscured half the airport, he said, but other planes had landed that morning.

The plane took off Monday morning from Raleigh - Durham and picked up the three Knit - Away executives in Southern Pines. According to Harold Gillis, who was acting as spokesman to the press for the textile plant Monday, the plane was being leased to the corporation while a new plane was being prepared for Knit -
