Miss Turbeville Is Bride Of David C. Allison

Miss Debbie Turbeville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turbeville, and David Clay Allison, son of Mrs. Charles M. Allison and the late Sgt. Allison, were married Saturday, May 10, at 5:30 p.m., at the Raeford United Methodist Church. The Rev. Gordon Ruggles officiated for the double ring ceremony.

The altar was decorated with four seven-branched candelabra, entwined with smilax and ivy and holding white candles in hurricane globes. Two urns filled with gladioli, chrysanthemums, carnations, gypsophila and pompons flanked the altar, and a double prie dieu was used for the benediction.

Music was presented by Brian Miller, organist, and Allen Plummer, vocalist, who sang, "Wedding Prayer" and "The Gift of Love".

Miss Debra Allison of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a floral printed, ivory organza dress with rose design in apricot and soft greens over pale apricot angelskin, designed with portrait neckline and capelet collar, full skirt with wide ruffle hemline, and shirred apricot organza sash with streamers in back. Her headpiece was a floral halo of organza roses in apricot shades with attached apricot illusion streamers, and she carried a single apricot mum tied with matching streamers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chantilace fashioned with scalloped sabrina neckline, long fitted sleeves, and cascading ruffles of lace forming a wide floor-length skirt which extended into a cathedral train. Her lace camelot cap held a four-tiered veil of imported silk illusion.

Josh Scull served as best man and ushers were Steve Plummer and Donald Plummer, cousins of the bridegroom, and Archie Crowder.

The mother of the bride wore a mint green, formal gown made with sequined bodice and capelet collar, and a corsage of apricot carnations.
