

HOMEOWNER OPPOSITION - Residents in the Thomasfield subdivision shown here, a secluded neighborhood of expensive homes west of the city, voiced opposition to the 211 by-pass route which will be constructed as close as 60 feet to one home, county commissioners were told.

requirement in the federal funding that the person chosen for the job had to be unemployed or underemployed.

After lengthy discussion and hearing county attorney Charles Hostetler gave a pessimistic opinion on the legality of the action, the board agreed to a revised motion which calls for the changing of the electrical inspector's job from a fee basis to a salaried position. Ellis is presently employed to do some electrical work for the county.

The board accepted a $358 bid from Blake's Construction of Raeford for exterior repairs to the old county office building, but debated more budget decisions without reaching any agreement on furniture for the new library and draperies for the new office building.

The board heard revised plans for the new library furniture from architect Tom Hayes and John Giles of Institutional Interiors of High Point. The original bid on furnishings was $52,800 and Giles outlines several alternate plans which would use existing furniture and trim costs.

The board agreed to delay any formal action on the bid until representatives of the library board could appear and study the revised plans. A meeting was set for 10 a.m. today (Thursday).

The board also elected to solicit more bids on the draperies for the county office building after hearing Hostetler's recommendation to do so.

A public hearing on the West Hoke Fire District request to expand to four miles was set for Oct. 6.

The board discussed plans for $13,500 in Title I funds for the coming year but agreed to delay any action until further study could be made.

Also tabled for later action was a request from the council of governments for re-worded resolutions dealing with administration of various grant programs, and a plan for implementation of an investigator for AFDC cases within the local government.

National 4-H Club Week will be October 5 - 11 and exhibits and other related events concerning Club Week will be on display.

Series On Older Adults Set By Library System

During September the Sandhill Regional Library System and the steering committee of Richmond County Organizations for Services to Older Persons, Inc., will present a series of programs entitled "Independence for Older Adults: Individual Rights and Liberties."

The series will be held in the auditorium at Richmond Technical Institute on September 9, 16, 23, and 30. The programs are scheduled to begin at 2:00 P.M. for each session. All programs are free of charge and open to the general public. This series is funded by a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

Each program in the series will feature two speakers and a panel of local people with experience or interest in the subjects. Members of the audience and the panel will be able to question the speakers on points of interest.

The Sept. 9 program will be "Historical Perspective on Independence for Older Adults." The speakers will be Dr. H. Tyler Blethen of Western Carolina University and

Dr. J. Howell Smith of Wake Forest University. Panel members are Mr. E. Bert McLaurin, Mrs. Ruth Watkins, Mr. J. E. Huneycutt, and the Rev. Dr. William DuBose (moderator).

On Sept. 16, the topic will be "Independent Living: Rights and Liberties." Speakers will be Dr. John E. Wrigley, UNC-Charlotte, and Dr. Ellen Winston, Chairman of National Voluntary Organizations for Independent Living for the Aging. The panel for this program will include Mr. Carleton Black, the Rev. Mr. Earle Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hagan, and Mrs. Madeline Jones (moderator).

The program for Sept. 23 will feature Dr. Louis F. Knort, UNC-Greensboro, and Dr. John H. Long, Greensboro College, speaking on "Financing the Rights and Liberties of Older Adults." Members of the panel are Mrs. Martha Adams (moderator), Mr. Richard Conder, Mr. Thomas B. Hunter, Mr. Robert Lowry, and Mr. Brent Yount.

The final program, Sept. 30, will be "Health for Independent Living." The speakers will be Dr. Larry R. Churchill of UNC-Chapel Hill and Dr. Linda M. Breyspraak of Duke University. Panelists for this program will be Mr. William Moss (moderator), Miss Janie Whitehead, Mrs. Cordeilla Steele, and Mrs. Ruth Wallace.

This series will be of interest to anyone concerned with the problems of older adults. Older people and professionals working with them are especially urged to attend.

Transportation to and from the program will be provided through the Outreach and Homebound Services vans of the Sandhill Regional Library System. Those people who would like this service may call the Outreach and Homebound Services Librarians at any library in the Sandhill Regional Library System. The number here is 875-2502.

Air Force Recruiting Musicians

The Air Force is seeking qualified musicians for its 17 bands, according to Maj. Winston R. Youngblood, U.S. Air Force Recruiting Detachment 307 commander.

Major Youngblood said the Air Force Band in Washington, D.C., is also looking for vocalists.

Young men and women between the ages of 17 and 27 interested in the band openings should contact their nearest Air Force recruiter for additional information.
