director of the Department of Social Services, and then voted unanimously to authorize the DSS to accept responsibility for implementing the program.

The new law requires more active in investigation and enforcement of payment of child support and localities may be penalized five percent of AFCD funds for failing to designate an agency to administer the enforcement. Localities are permitted to designate any of the wide range of existing agencies.

Niblock told the board it was his plan to designate someone already working for the Department to take over the job, saying his office would be ultimately responsible for the success of the program.

The commissioners learned of a $940.68 bill which was assessed for late filing of the county's federal employee withholding taxes for the April-June quarter.

County manager T.B. Lester told the board the payment was late due to a mix-up with the check issuing machine, but the government wanted the penalty paid by Sept. 11.

"I don't believe we ought to pay it," McBryde said, irritated, and the board discussed the possible consequences after Lester warned a fine could be levied in addition to the penalty.

exploited by reinforcement and reward to develop him to his full potential as a whole man.

The significant facets of the Pro-Life Program, often referred to as the "Master Game Plan" to win the "Game of Life," are eight in number: vigorous physical conditioning; stressful, challenging training; leadership seminars; resource management; on-duty education; off-duty programs; human relations improvements; and improvement in the moral climate.

There is no particular order of merit for these Pro-Life facets, but General Emerson believes that useful participation in training and education programs requires a sound body. Therefore, physical development, known as the "Fit-to-Fight" program, is the starting point for most soldiers coming to Pro-Life Country at Fort Bragg. Pro-Life hinges on two important truths; one, the young volunteer soldier of the Modern Professional Army has the intelligence and physical ability to be a good soldier even though he or she may lack a history of success due to a lack of opportunity, and, two, the Army has an obligation to motivate and reward him or her for service and disciplined behavior.

Pro-Life is a positive philosophy for success - both unit success and individual success. Its theme is that no one is predestined to be a loser in life. Everyone can succeed, even if he or she has previously lacked advantages and encouragement. By grasping the unusual opportunities for physical, mental, and spiritual development offered by the XVIII Airborne Corps, every soldier can be a winner.

President Harold Gillis commended General Emerson for his fine presentation and program, and thanked him for a talk that kept the members closely attentive throughout.

bids for widening, curbing, and gutter work on city streets.

The proposed project is for Bethel Road from Donaldson St. to Harris Avenue, and for Donaldson St. from Weaver to McMillan Streets.

Total estimate made by city engineer Lacy Koonce for the work is put at $102,000, but this includes one block where residents are not likely to give easements, Gaddy warned. The major portion of the work was estimated at $79,000.

Home visitor Mrs. Willard Shell gave a report on activities since the start of the home visiting program last month and told the council 47 visits to elderly and shut-ins have been made.

Mrs. Shell reported she has 244 persons on the current list and expects to add more.

The council also reviewed a listing of errors made on tax computations and okayed a release of $415.82 in taxes owed.

The council reviewed a list of complaints made by city residents, mostly concerning garbage and trash pick-up, which totaled 82 for the month of August. 13 complaints were received during the last four days of July, according to the report.

regulations. Businessmen, for instance, feel they are being strangled by red tape.

Since Congress is in recess every August, I can't think of a better way that a member can spend his time than in getting around his home state, and finding out what is on people's minds. I believe it's a lot better information than he can get talking to people in Washington.

Chairman Ralph Barnhart said officials would accept a reasonable explanation for the delay and the board agreed to make an attempt to have the penalty waived before sending payment.

All About Words, and taking notes as his attorney questioned prospective jurors.

One question repeatedly asked of the prospective jurors dealt with how many of the group had children about the same age as Pruitt and if this fact would have any bearing on their verdict. The jurors were reminded that a guilty verdict would sentence Pruitt to the gas chamber.

Hugie Perston Cahves, Sylvia B. Adkins, Josephine P. McDonald, James Lewis Blue, Texanna McRae, Ruth S. Gibson McLean and Marjorie J. Roberts were all excused by Judge McKinnon before the noon recess because they said the death sentence either affected them personally or religiously and would not give a verdict of guilty because of their beliefs.

Jessie Winston, Jr., was also excused because he failed to understand that a guilty verdict would bring about a death sentence.

Johnny Kershaw and Luddie McNeill were also excused after they answered questions regarding views on capital punishment. Rodney Jones stepped down for "personal reasons".

Pruitt, married and the father of two children, ages five and three, has been imprisoned since his arrest shortly after the fire which destroyed the Donlin home.

The Donlins, whites, were described as neighbors of Pruitt on Patton Street at the time of the killings.

Mrs. Donlin was strangled, beaten on the head and stabbed. The children died in the fire.

Pruitt was arrested by Cumberland County authorities after a pair of blood-stained fatigues were found in his home, according to prior testimony.

Then I said, "Here am I! Send me." (Isaiah 6:8, RSV)

As I read the Book of Acts, each chapter seemed to meet my particular need that day. I began writing down thoughts that came to me as I read. Oh, how I wanted to share the truths of this book by the time I had finished. It might help another as it had helped me.

I had no experience writing for publication. After months of hesitating, I sent my comments on several chapters to the editor of a devotional guide.

MONEY CROPS

N.C. Agricultural Extension Agents estimate that North Carolina sold $1.3 billion worth of field crops last year, led by flue-cured tobacco which was worth an estimated $703 million. Corn, soybeans, peanuts and cotton followed in order of importance.

CUT COSTS

One way to cut house construction costs is the use of insulation board instead of sheathing where it will be strong enough to resist the wind load and support the other loads that it must, according to North Carolina State University extension engineers.
