out, I'll just mark it out, it doesn't have to be initialed or anything. I suppose maybe I ought to start initialing it now", he said. Barrington said Alford wouldn't have been charged with a felony under the circumstances involved In the school incident, and Mc-Fadyen concurred, saying it was a misdemeanor case.

"Even if it was a felony, I should have gotten a written order for release", Barrington complained.

tending to contact representatives to get things done. He mentioned the neglect of the courts and prisons and called court procedure "archaic".

"We need to get a definite timetable to handle criminal pro-cedure." he added.

Finally he said that the number one concern of the people of North Carolina was not the economy, but was the rising crime rate according to results furnished by the Institute of Government.

After the speech, Hargett entertained questions about what to do about some of the problems he mentioned.

willing to take the risk and the project was approved in committee. We are constantly facing new situations in dealing with govern-ment building today. Energy costs, for instance, are equalling financing costs, as many of you know who have seen utility bills become certificate," he said. "I make 90% of the bonds for the Indians in Cumberland County and I've never had any trouble making bonds. Robeson County has more Lumbee Indians than any other county in the state, and I'm the only Indian that owns a bonding company in North Carolina, he concluded.

Background Scripture Genesis 3 Devotional Reading: Matthew 20: 20-28.

Being a "favorite son" isn't always all it's cracked up to be! Take Joseph for example.

He was born into a devout home and his mother was his father's favorite wife. He was undeniably his father's favorite son and he occupied a position of conspicuous favor in the household. Not only Joseph knew he was favored, everyone else did too. Even his dreams taught him to expect a favored role in life.

Yet, for a "favorite son," he got off to a bad beginning: almost mur-dered Ly his brothers, he is left to die in the wilderness instead.

Then, when all seemed lost, Joseph was saved from a sure death caravan that carried him off

Joseph also had something else going for him: "Now Joseph was handsome and good-looking" (Genesis 39:6b). This time, not only Joseph thought so, but so did his master's wife. With great per-sistence she tried to seduce the young handsome Hebrew man.

Today, many people would say, "Why not?" But Joseph manfully attempted do what he believed to be the

to do right thing. And he was motivated by two reasons. First of all, his master had been very good to Joseph, giving him and sharing with him almost everything he had. Secondly, Joseph knew that his master placed great trust in him: "Lo, having me my master has no concern about anything in the house, and he has put everything that he has in my hand..." (39:8). Because of his master's trust and generosity, Joseph felt a re-sponsibility that would not permit him to succumb to the wife's temptations.

Lastly, Joseph believed that to give in to his temptations would be, not just a sin against his master, but also against God himself. "How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?" (39:9).

Hooray for Joseph! He did the right thing! Nevertheless the consequences of his choice must have seemed disappointing, for instead of earning the admiration of his master's wife, Joseph became the target of her vindictiveness. Was it Shakespeare who said, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned"? The scorned woman was determined to avenge herself.

Furthermore, instead of his master rewarding Joseph's fidelity. he instead accepted the ficitious story of his wife and had Joseph thrown into prison. His fidelity brought only more misery to him. That seems unfair doesn't it? Since Joseph resisted the temp-tation and did what God wanted him to do, wouldn't it seem that God should have spared him of these consequences? Yet, God never promises us that doing the "right thing" will guarantee us fair treatment. There is never any assurance that obeying God will keep us out of trouble or make people admire us. In fact, as Jesus God's will, if anything, is some-times a guarantee that there will be a cross for us.
