Proper Insulation — Savings

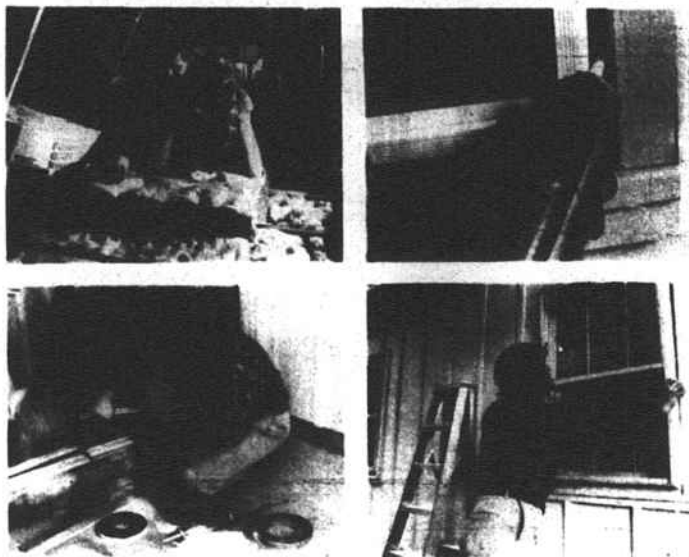

By Willie Featherstone, Jr.
Asst. Agriculture Agent

Like to permanently cut your home's energy consumption in half and substantially reduce your heating and cooling bills?

According to recent government and industry energy conservation studies, many home owners could permanently cut their home's energy use in half and substantially reduce their fuel bills, simply by installing such readily available improvements as (clockwise from upper left) attic insulation, caulking, storm glass, and weatherstripping.

The roof or attic accounts for a major percentage of home fuel and energy waste. The most economical way to permanently reduce this waste through the roof is to insulate the attic floor. "Experts agree that this alone can cut a home's fuel waste as much as 30 percent. That means lower fuel bills winter and summer."

Weatherstripping and caulking, which are relatively inexpensive improvements, can save up to 10 percent a year on fuel waste. NCSU Extension Housing Specialists recommend that weatherstripping be applied around all four sides of entrance doors and any other doors between heated and unheated

1-2-3-4 - Savings of as much as 50 per cent on heating and cooling costs are possible by installing attic insulation, caulking, storm glass, and weatherstripping. Besides saving money, you will also help cut energy consumption.

spaces, and that caulking be applied around exterior windows and door frames.

Storm doors and windows, while comparatively expensive, can reduce heating and cooling energy waste by still another 15 percent. Storm doors should be added to outside entrances, and storm windows are advisable even if a home already has double-glazed type windows.

Bicentennial Idea Book

Are you among the millions of Americans involved in commemorating the Bicentennial? If not, there is still time to join the festivities.

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA) has just published a booklet describing some of the ways America's 200th anniversary will be celebrated in communities across the land.

Called "What YOU can Do: A Bicentennial Idea Book," the 10-page publication is available free of charge.

The booklet originated in ARBA's regional office in Atlanta, based on their experiences working with local communities. It describes 20 ways Americans are participating in the Bicentennial, and illustrates a diversity of ideas.

In his preface to the booklet, John W. Warner, ARBA Administrator, says: "Many of us have our own ideas for the commemoration. For the most part, these are very personal kinds of commitments which come from deep inside us.

Frequently, however, these ideas are potentially very meaningful to our communities and offer an opportunity for a very real and lasting contribution.

"It is precisely for this reason that this book has been prepared; to share plans and ideas with you."

The "Idea Book" can be obtained by writing any of ARBA's 10 regional offices, or: ARBA, 2401 E Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20276; or call (202) 634-1776.

COMMENT

We need more of the spirit of 1776 when a mans word was his bond and he was a statesman instead of a politician.
