rested in their small typewritten history -- maybe they think they're not important enough, or the publication isn't elegant enough.

"But we are vitally interested," she insists. "We want one copy of every published genealogy of every family in the state."

"The emphasized that every scrap of information is valuable and of interest to someone, now or in the future. She mentioned, too, that the plain typewritten histories, small in size, and unbound, often contain as much real information as the beautifully bound keepsake volumes, and many are quite well-done."

"We are constantly collecting all kinds of records, published abstracts, published church and Bible records and compiled cemetery records."

"We are deeply indebted to those dedicated souls who bundle themselves up and go out to copy tombstone records," she mentioned.

Mrs. Albright explained that still today, since most records are kept on a county-wide basis, anyone beginning research must have the country of origin or he might have to search records of all 100 counties.

There, again the family booklets are immensely helpful, she pointed out. Even if some of the recollections (often written years later) are not entirely accurate, in most every case, the county of origin is correct, she added.

Again she emphasized the fascination of reading the life and times of people, for instance, the household inventories. Mrs. Albright said questions always come to her mind such as, if a family with six children lists a table and four chairs, did the youngsters sit on the stools, or stand while eating, or did the family members eat in shifts? Or, "Where might the housewife have kept this or that (object unfamiliar to today's housewife)?" Or, "What is a britches band?"

Mrs. Albright is grateful to the diligence and to the generosity of any who have published a family history and presented a copy to the State Library Genealogy Section. "These gifts enable us to serve more people with our very limited genealogy funds," she stated. The contributions received give us a broader and deeper collection, and ours is already one of the best collections in the southeast.

"And for those successful hunters," she added with a twinkle and a grin, "we can provide a room for screaming."

three, and Rachael, one. Harris and his family are members of the Methodist Church, and he is a member to the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and the North Carolina Jaycees. He has also been in charge of the Special Olympics in the Burlington area, and has worked with youth coaching.

Harris said his goals at Hoke High would be to make, create, and sustain a successful and winning program; to have and induce participation; and to coach the players as if they were his own.

He said his philosophy involves hard work, dedication, and the creation of an atmosphere where the players have fun playing the game.

"The key to our success will be the players themselves and the student body's support. If we have players who will meet the challenge to make themselves the best player possible, and have the support of the student body and the community. I think the won-loss record will take care of itself," said Harris.

He said the offense he will use will depend on the personnel available, but he would like to use an option type offense, and possibly utilize a passing attack.

Harris said he likes the wishbone offense and has used it in the past. "I'm a defensive control coach and I like my defense to make things happen," he said.

"To be successful, you have got to have a sound defense," he added.

He also expressed the importance of the kicking game. Harris said he hoped to expand the weight program at the high school and hopes to get involved with it early next week.

"My wife and I have fallen in love with the community and are looking forward to making it our home," he concluded.
