CANNING ALERT
The canning season is just about here. So if you haven't already done so -- get your canning supplies ready to go.
Look for jars that are heat resistant -- so they won't break during the canning process. Also make sure there are no nicks at the top edges of the jars. A nick will cause an imperfect seal -- and that could mean spoiled food.
Remember very old canning jars become brittle with age and are more likely to break. Also, that jars from commercially processed food are a gamble when used for home canning.
Now, here's some good news. There should be enough canning lids to go around this year.
By the way. Now is a good time to check your pressure canner. Make sure the pressure gauge works and the temperature can be maintained during processing. Raeford Hardware has equipment for checking pressure gauges.
So get ready now -- stock up on canning jars and lids -- and check out that pressure canner. It will help the canning season ahead go smoother.

CARD OF THANKS
May we extend our heartfelt thanks to those of you who expressed your sympathy in so many ways during our recent bereavement. Your kindnesses have meant much to us. The Family of David Propst.

READY-SERVE
Packaging for the future may include produce in more convenient forms. Ready-to-serve grapefruit halves and peeled oranges have been forecast. Other suggestions, some already available, include sliced onions; peeled avocados, carrots and apples; fruit salads; and segmented broccoli and cauliflower.

The family wishes to express their sincere appreciation for each expression of sympathy extended to them during their recent bereavement. The Family of Rev. R. E. Fisher.

BARLEY CROP
Barley production in North Carolina this year was estimated at almost 3 million bushels, up 16 percent from the previous crop. The state is not a major barley producer, planting only around 62,000 acres statewide.

CARD OF THANKS
I wish to thank the N.C. Forestry Dept. and the Hoke County volunteer firemen for their efforts in fighting the forest fire last week. Mrs. Myrtle S. Caloway.
