

Schools Celebrate Bicentennial

Left to right are pictured Cynthia Henley, Tracy Ferguson and Melissa Butler who received prizes for best costumes among the girls at Scurlock School's colonial dress-up day.

A Revolutionary war soldier, a colonial dame, and a rugged frontiersman await their turns to step out in the parade at Scurlock School Thursday.

Left to right are Carl Bundy, Brad Edwards and Ronnie Davis, winners of the best costumed boys' contest at Scurlock School last week.

It was 'giddyup, let's go' as Ronnie Branch rode the winners of the best costume contest around the Scurlock School courtyard for the finale to the day's Bicentennial activities.

Scurlock assistant principal Ronnie Branch is behind the reins as the Bicentennial parade for the youngsters begins with the appearance of the old-fashioned horse and buggy.

Thursday's warm spring weather and sunny skies made it perfect for an elaborate colonial dress-up parade at Scurlock School.

Bonnets and long dresses on girls and everything from rough and tumble cowboy costumes to elegant gentlemen's finery on boys were won for Thursday's dress-up day at Scurlock School.

Eric Maxwell and Tina Rose received the best costumed awards among the second graders at South Hoke School Thursday. Eric is in Mrs. Jordan's class and Tina is in Mrs. Horsley's class.

Regina Bullard and Tommy Burgess drew top honors among the third graders at South Hoke School for their Bicentennial costumes. Regina is in Mrs. Cameron's class and Tommy is in Mrs. Dubois' class.

Reba Miles (on left) and Kim Smith were judged best costumed among fourth graders at South Hoke School's Bicentennial dress-up. Reba is in Mrs. Wood's class and Kim is in Mrs. Maynor's class.

These South Hoke pupils enjoyed their turn at performing a high-stepping square dance routine which was a feature of the school's Bicentennial program Thursday.

Swing your partner, round and round, and South Hoke students really kicked up their heels for an old-fashioned square dance Thursday to celebrate Bicentennial Week activities.

Patriotic tunes and music of America's history filled the gymnasium at Hoke High Wednesday morning as students assembled for a 1776 band concert.

It's square dance time during festivities at West Hoke School last week. Other dances included the "Charleston" and an exercise dance by one of the gym classes.