drizzle during most of the day Monday threatened the festivities for a second time.

About 800-1,000 persons, far less than expected, turned out at Hoke High stadium with umbrellas for the program staged by the Hoke County Bicentennial Commission.

Rev. M. H. Williams gave a special prayer message after the flag raising by the N. C. National Guard and singing of the Star Spangled Banner by the Hoke County Singers under the direction of Mary Archie McNeill.

Along with the Hoke County Singers, the Sandhill Choral Society directed by Russell McAllister performed.

Following a talk on the history of the 50 year-old Raeford Fire Department given by Robert Gatlin, the Raeford firemen put on the main event - a 30 minute fireworks show which kept the skies ablaze with color and lights.

The evening was rounded off with the cutting of the county's Bicentennial birthday cake, prepared by Carolyn Ashley, which was served to the youngsters.

Wildlife By Jim Dean Afield N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission

"Am I going to be able to get steel shot to use this year at Currituck?"

That was one of the first questions that came up when it was recently announced by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that only steel shot would be allowed for waterfowl hunting on or over the waters and marshes of Currituck County this fall and winter.

The answer, apparently, is yes. Steel shot will be available and the various major arms manufacturers have stated that waterfowl hunters should have no trouble obtaining adequate supplies.

"We don't anticipate any problems," said Howard Hansen of Federal Cartridge Corporation in Minneapolis, Minnesota. "We expect to have plenty of steel shot for the Atlantic Flyway, including the area in North Carolina where they will be required."

Spokesmen at Remington and Olin also expressed opinions that there would be enough shot. The steel shot will most likely be distributed through normal sales channels. It is anticipated that retail outlets in and around Currituck County will get a higher proportion of the steel shot, but that steel shot would also be available throughout North Carolina at major retail sporting goods stores.

For the upcoming 1976-77 waterfowl season in North Carolina, only Currituck County will be affected by the Federal steel shot requirement. Currituck County is one of five areas on the Atlantic Coast where only steel shot will be permitted; however, the ban on lead shot in Currituck County will apply only on or over the waters and marshes of the county. That means that hunters shooting geese or other waterfowl in fields, for example, will still be able to use lead shot.

The purpose of the Federal ban on lead shot is to stop the accumulation of spent lead pellets in areas where they build up and are ingested by geese, ducks and coots. If enough lead shot are ingested along with grains of sand which the birds use to "grind" their food, then the result can be lead poisoning and eventually death to the birds.

Currituck County was selected as one of the nine areas for the lead shot ban because it has been a traditional waterfowl hunting area for many, many years. That means that chances are pretty good that there are quite a few lead pellets in the sand.

The search for a suitable substitute for lead shot has been a long and controversial one, yet biologists and hunters have been hopeful that some way could be found to reduce the use of lead shot in those scattered areas where lead shot buildup could cause lead poisoning for waterfowl species.

This fall will mark the first time that steel shot have been required on any area in North Carolina, and it will be interesting to see how it works out.

Margaret McNeill gave us the history of Antioch Presbyterian Church. At Antioch we were served tea, brownies and cookies.

We also want to express our thanks to Mrs. Frances Wooley for her help in making our week of travel a success. Her acting as chaperone was greatly appreciated.

Without the interest and aid of these ladies and gentlemen the trip would have been a complete flop.

Thanks again to you all.
