Higher Cotton Prices Prompts Contracting

Higher cotton prices during June resulted in a moderate increase in forward crop contracting, according to USDA's Cotton Classing Office in Raleigh.

The 70,000 planted acres reflects no change from the April planting intentions, according to USDA Crop Reporting Board. National plantings of 11,711,000 acres indicate an increase of about 520,000 acres over the April intentions.

Slightly more than one-third of North Carolina's 70,000 planted acres has been contracted through June 30. This represents an increase in contracting of about 20 per cent over May. No contracting was reported through this date last year. Contracting figures were obtained through informal contacts with farmers, ginners, merchants and other cotton leaders.

Contract prices received were up sharply. Basis contract terms were mostly 300 points off December futures, basis grade 41, staple 34. December futures prices rose about 1500 points during the month of June. CCC loan differentials apply to other grades on basis contracts. "All in grade" contract terms ranged from 65.00 to 75.00 cents per pound. Cotton reduced in grade is discounted 100 points. Acceptable mike range is 3.4 to 5.1.

SIDEWALK SALES - Friday's sunny weather attracted good crowds downtown for the annual merchants sidewalk sale. Police guided traffic to help clear congestion at some intersections which became heavy in the afternoon.

Sunday School Lesson

The story of the "Rich Young Ruler" (as it is more commonly known), is one of those stories that can easily - though not comfortably - be personalized. Try reading it, sometime and substituting the pronoun "I" for the young man who came to Jesus inquiring of eternal life.

It doesn't take too much imagination to hear ourselves saying to Jesus, "Lord, what remains for me to do in order to be assured to eternal life? We may not verbalize it very often to our friends and neighbors, but many of us, like the young man in the story, are concerned to find assurance of eternal life. No pastor who visits the sick and the dying can be unaware of that deep concern.

I must assume that the young man in Matthew 19 was sincere in his question, yet, at the same time, there was also at work in him a certain smug pride. It was the kind of question which is asked by someone who anticipates that the answer is going to be to his favor. Consciously or unconsciously, he is not so much asking a question as he is seeking a "pat on the head."

One of the reasons I say this is that the young man seems to be so "wrapped up in himself" that he misses what Jesus says to him in the response to his initial question. "Why do you ask me about what is good," says Jesus, "One there is who is good." It is as if Jesus already knows what is in this man's mind: he knows the man is rather proud of his own righteousness. So he reminds the man that no one but God alone is perfectly good.

The young man, however, seems to miss this statement and only hears Jesus say: "If you would enter life, keep the commandments" (19-17). "Which?" replies the young man, still smugly, for when Jesus digests the Ten Commandments, the young man is eager to reply: All these I have observed; what do I still lack?" (19-20). The question he asks skirts the edge of being an outright boast.

With his amazing insight into this young man, Jesus challenged him in the one area where the man was extremely vulnerable: his love of material possessions. We must realize that Jesus is not laying down this challenge for all Christians, for material possessions are not the stumbling block for some that they are for others. He challenged this young man to give away all he had because he knew this was the man's weakness. He really did want eternal life (just as we do), but he wanted something even more (just as many of us do.)
