There is a new sugar on the market. What I have seen has been packaged in clear plastic. Following is some information about this new product.

U.S. Sugar Company, Inc. is a company that has been in the retail sugar business for a great many years and has been an innovator in both packaging and product development. Extensive research and product improvement has resulted in a blend of two sugars: Sucrose and Dextrose. This improved blend is designed to enhance the desirable characteristics of each sugar.

Sucrose is more commonly known to the housewife as cane sugar, or beet sugar and is commercially refined from sugar cane or sugar beets. Dextrose is a natural sugar which is commercially refined from corn.

Take a closer look at the ingredient panel of the next sweetened product you buy. Chances are it will contain dextrose (or corn syrup solids which are the same as dextrose). For many years, industry has been relying on dextrose or dextrose/sucrose blends as sweeteners. Commercially made products using dextrose include baked goods, frosting, candies, jams and ice cream.

U.S. Sugar combined sucrose and dextrose for two reasons:

(1) It provides an economic savings for the housewife each time she uses it.

(2) As a sugar, dextrose has unique properties which impart certain advantages when used in baking and as a table sweetener in the home.

When making frostings with U.S. Confectioners Sugar it may be necessary to slightly decrease the amount of liquid used to get the desired frosting consistency. This is due to the greater moisture retention of dextrose.

Some of the properties that are unique to the sugar dextrose may result in slight differences in the finished product. For example:

(1) Baked products have finer, more compact grain or texture due to the finer granulation of the sugar.

(2) Baked goods will be moist. Dextrose is able to absorb and retain more moisture than cane sugar and therefore, products will not tend to dry out as quickly.

(3) When sugar is used for decorative purposes and applied before baking a difference in final appearance will be noticed. For example, when cookie is rolled in sugar (either powdered or granulated) before baking, U.S. Sugar will form a glaze. This is due to the fact that the sugar dextrose melts at a lower temperature than cane sugar.

(4) Due to characteristics unique to dextrose, our product is not recommended for use in meringue shells, egg-white based cookies, cooked crystalline frostings or crystalline candies (such as fudge, penuche, fondant) using standard recipes.

(5) Very desirable results are obtained when using the blended sugar in making jams and jellies and in canning. Recipe changes are not necessary.

Jobs, Earnings Increase In June Economy Report

North Carolina Commissioner of Labor Avery Nye reported increases in both employment and earnings in the Tar Heel economy for June.

"Employment in nonfarm establishments rose 9,700 last month, while the earnings of factory workers increased two cents to an hourly average of $3.73", said Commissioner Nye. "June employment was up in 23 major groups, and dropped in only six groups. This encouraging report is indicative of a continuing upturn in North Carolina's economy picture".

Nye said the 9,700 June job gain brought to 2,046,200 the total of employment in nonfarm establishments - up 53,400 compared with June, 1975. A factory employment rise of 5,300 in June brought total factory jobs to 768,000, for a gain of 37,800 over a year ago. Non-manufacturing jobs increased 4,400 to a June total of 1,278,200, reaching a total 15,600 higher than a year earlier.

A fractional rise of one-tenth of an hour brought the factory work-week up to a June average of 39.9 hours. Nye stated. Combined with the two-cent increase in average hourly earnings, this pushed weekly earnings of factory employees up $1.37 to a June average of $148.83.

Nye listed the 23 industry groups reporting June job increases as follows: textile mill products 1,500; electrical machinery 900; food products 900; machinery 500; fabricated metals and cigarette factories, 300 each; lumber, stone, clay and glass, paper, and rubber and plastic products, 200 each; primary metals, transportation equipment, tobacco stemmeries, apparel, and other durable goods, 100 each. In the non-manufacturing sector, jobs
