As fuel bills continue to rise and inexpensive energy sources continue to dwindle, more people are becoming aware of the necessity to conserve as much energy as possible. Alternate heating systems are a solution to conserving energy and one that will continue to be explored and developed. However, at this point, such systems as solar heat systems are not completely practical for moderate-priced homes.

James A. Hunt, "gave their personal opinions about it and the black minister brought up religion. Well, he's involving religion with politics and he's not representing the citizens of the county", he said.

McNeill said he and some of the other restaurant operators have banded together to fight the latest decision and he said he got 2,000 signatures to a petition in less than two days. He did not present the petition at the Monday meeting, however.

The commissioners listened to the opponents of the resolution for nearly an hour but did not change their minds.

"If a man can't buy enough beer on Saturday to last through Sunday he has got a financial problem or a drinking problem," commissioner Danny DeVane said.

DeVane, newest member of the county board, has been an outspoken critic of the ABC law and he suggested the plan of asking the General Assembly to remedy the situation at the Jan. 4 meeting of commissioners.

In other business Monday, the board appropriated $7,500 in county money to the Hoke County Medical Betterment Association, a non-profit group of citizens trying to attract physicians to Raeford. Currently there are only two practitioners in the city.

Commissioners also received a written resolution signed by four out of the five Board of Social Services members requesting funds for a building to store used clothes and household furnishings for needy families. The resolution also requested a truck to transport the articles.

Commissioners took no action on the requests and ordered the matter tabled until the budget for the coming year is prepared.

The board formally adopted the new personal ordinance which covers all county employees. A salary plan and classification schedule are to be added later.

A petition from Antioch Township residents seeking the creation of a fire protection district was received but no date was set for an election.

Commissioners received two bids for autos for the sheriff's department but did not act on them. County manager T.B. Lester said there was some misunderstanding about the specifications and the board did not want to make a decision.

There are other ways we handle the high cost and scarcity of energy, and the most feasible of these is the better insulation of the home.

The North Carolina Building Code (Section 36) states that all new construction shall have the following insulation values: ceilings U - .05 or R-19, walls U - .10 or R-11, and floors that are over heated basements or ventilated crawl spaces, U - .10 or R-19. "U" is the symbol for heat transmission and "R" is the symbol for resistance to the flow of heat.

As the price of fuel increases, the amount of insulation that can be afforded increases. At the present time, with the present rate of fuel price inflation, we can justify much higher R values in our homes. Recommendations should now be R-30 for ceilings, R-19 for walls, and R-10 for floors over unheated basements and ventilated crawl spaces. Some people are already beginning to look strongly at an R-38 for ceilings.

Fiber glass is the most widely used type of insulation and it can be purchased in batts (4-foot long sections), rolls, or loose fill. Six-inch fiber batts give an R value of 19. However, it takes eight to nine inches of blown-in fiber glass insulation to give an R-19.

The increase in R value from 11 to 19 in the floor presents no problem. However, to increase the R value from 11 to 19 and 19 to 30 in the walls and ceiling respectively does require some modification in the structure itself.

In order to use successfully a six-inch batt of fiber glass in the wall, 2 x 6 studs would have to be used. These could be placed on two-foot centers. The extra cost of these studs is offset somewhat by the fact that fewer studs are needed. If 2 x 4 studs are used with 3/4 inches of fiber glass, then an insulated sheathing board could be used that would bring the R value up to 19. Polystyrene and polyurethane rigid insulation are two examples of this. Of the two, polyurethane has the higher R value per inch. A 1/2-inch polyurethane board has an R value of approximately 6.0. A 3/4-inch polystyrene board has an R value of 4.05.

In order to do an effective job of increasing the R value from 19 to 30 or 38 in the ceiling, some modification in the rafter system must exist. The distance between the top plate of the exterior wall and the rafter that normally rests on it must be increased to allow for ventilation as well as the increased depth of insulation over the plate. This change can be effectively made by using a modified truss or by using a 2 x 10 band around the top plate in the case of traditional framing.

Insulation standards for homes should be raised to offset the continued increase in the price of fuel.

By W.S. Young, Agri. Ext. Chr. & Freddie O'Neal, Asst. Agri. Agent

For the person that is really interested in swine production and can accept the fact that there is a lot of hard work involved, the best time to get into the business is when prices are low. You can get your breeding stock cheap and get started while the prices are low and start selling when the prices are high again. It seems that the successful swine producers are the ones that go into the swine business when prices are low. The biggest failures come when people go into the business when hog prices are high.

The 1978 hog slaughter will possibly be below that of 1977, so it looks like we could be seeing better hog prices in 1978. As for 1977, it still looks like we will have a less profitable year than the last two years of 1975 and 1976. How much actual expansion is yet to be determined, but most economists agree that 1977 will not be a profitable year for swine production. With the indication that 1977 will not be a good year, many interested swine producers have been discouraged. If this interest was due only to the high hog prices and not the sincere interest in swine production, then this is good. The quicker we can get the swine industry stabilized and not have the ins and outs, we will be able to more closely control the hog numbers and the price.
