"Then render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's."

What kind of answer was that?

Was Jesus giving his followers a rule-of-thumb that could be used whenever faith and state seemed in conflict?

Well, yes....and no.

It was the beginning of an answer, but not the whole of it. To those Jews who believed that any co-operation with the Roman authorities was contrary to their allegiance to God, Jesus was indi-

Academy Seeks Applicants

FORT BRAGG -- The United States Military Academy Preparatory School (USMAPS) at Fort Monmouth, N.J., offers qualified men and women of the Active Army and Army Reserve an opportunity to qualify for admission to the United States Military Academy (USMA) at West Point, N.Y.

Applications are now being accepted for the 1978 - 79 USMAPS class. To be eligible, a few basic requirements must be met. The applicant must:

-- be a U.S. citizen or become one prior to entering the USMA.

-- be at least 17 and not more than 21 years of age on July 1 of the year that he or she enters the USMAPS.

-- not be married or have legal obligation to support children.

-- be in good health, have no disqualifying defects, and have vision correctable to 20/20.

-- be a high school graduate or equivalent, with a solid academic background. Ideally, applicants should have four years of English and three years of college preparatory mathematics. Anyone with obvious leadership potential and a weaker academic background should not be discouraged from applying, since many other factors are considered.

-- be highly recommended by commander, counselors and teachers.

The final selection for the cadetships will be made in June, so applications should be submitted as soon as possible.

Help in filling out applications may be obtained by calling Col. Cleatus J. Cox, Fort Bragg's USMAPS application coordinator at 396-4011.

ating significant disagreement. His answer, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's...." says plainly that God's children do have responsibilities to the state. Since it was the question of paying taxes that precipitated this question, Jesus is obviously saying that taxation was one of them.

To those, on the other hand, who feel that the believer must in every situation and choice be obedient to the state, Jesus was also saying that there are areas of life in which man owes his highest obedience to God alone. Thus, Jesus was not agreeing with either extreme. He did not believe that a person had to choose to obey only the state, or only God.

The problem for us is that, apart from the obvious reference to paying taxes, Jesus' response does not spell out just what belongs to God and what belongs to Caesar. So how can we know Jesus' view on these knotty conflicts between faith and state?

The answer, I believe, is that we must not look for this one utterance -- on "Caesar" and "God" -- to provide us with all the answers. All Jesus is saying in it is that it does not have to be God or Caesar. As he responds it is evident that it is God and Caesar. Beyond that, we must look elsewhere.

If we look at the rest of his life and teachings we begin to see more of the answer. For one thing, it is evident from his whole life that, although he was generally a law-abiding citizen, his greatest allegiance was always to God. He followed the commands of Caesar so long as they were not in conflict with the commands he received from God. Therefore, there were times when he was critical of state officials (Luke 13:32). There were times when he was not cooperative with public officials and was even sharp in some of his replies (Luke 22:23). He obviously could have saved himself before Pilate, but he refused to go back on his God-given mission. So, Jesus, was executed by the state as a common criminal, a gross miscarriage of justice.
