

Brazil Missionaries To Speak Here

The Rev. and Mrs. George Megill, Methodist missionaries to Brazil, will speak March 7 in the Raeford United Methodist Church sanctuary.

The program will start at 7:30 p.m.

The couple founded the Cordeiro Missionary Project of the First Annual Conference, Brazilian Methodist Church, three years ago. Megill is pastor.

The church has 40 members and is planned as the center for establishing new churches in surrounding towns which have no Methodist churches.

Megill preaches in homes once a month in three neighboring communities in which he and his wife hope to start churches. He also teaches Bible, preaching and evangelism in a lay pastor's school and also promotes mission giving and preaches revivals in established churches at least 10 times a year.

The Rev. and Mrs. Megill have served 15 years in Brazil.

Megill was born in Kansas and reared in Oklahoma. He and his wife (June Aigner) are graduates of the University of Tulsa, Okla., with bachelor of arts degrees.

Mrs. Megill's degree is in religion and social work. She graduated in 1949. She served as a public welfare case worker in North Carolina before entering missionary service, and worked with the church Social Service Commission besides other areas of church life. She plays the piano for services and gives piano lessons, and teaches handicraft work to others. The proceeds from the sales of crafts work are used to help pay for the Megills' church building and parsonage.

Mrs. Megill is a native of Richmond, Va.

Megill earned the Master of Divinity degree at Duke University after graduating from Tulsa U., and also did other graduate at Duke and at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. He served as pastor of several churches in North Carolina before entering missionary service in 1962.

In Brazil Megill also has served as superintendent of a children's home, a dean and teacher of a small junior-college-level seminary, and, for four years, as superintendent of a Methodist district 200 to 300 miles long with 12 to 15 churches.

He also has conducted a weekly radio program.

The Megills have three children: Norman, 31, David, 28, and Margaret, 24.

The Megills' home assignment started last December and will continue till April.

Mikki Freeze In Model Congress

Mikki Freeze, a Hoke County High School senior, was among the 17 high school students who represented North Carolina at the Seventh annual Convention II, a model Congress which considered bills to amend the U.S. Constitution, held February 10-13 in Washington, D.C.

Miss Freeze, daughter of Mrs. Oleta Lopez, was among the applicants chosen to attend the session. The North Carolinians were among 183 students from most of the 50 states who were chosen to participate.

Miss Freeze said Monday the sessions were interesting and fun but work. She said they ran from about 7:30 a.m. till 9:30 p.m. daily, except for breaks for lunch and dinner, and one research period kept her and others up till 4 a.m. getting information for a bill.

She added that each bill to amend the Constitution was debated pro and con, and that not a single bill succeeded in getting enacted. She said passage of a bill has been rare in the previous six sessions of the Convention. On the other hand, she indicated, this conforms with reality. The Constitution of the United States has been amended only 25 times since the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Of the amendments, the first

12, making up the Bill of Rights, were added between 1787 and the final ratification in November 1789 (at the second convention.)

Mark To Speak On Irish Customs

The Rev. J. Douglas Mark, associate minister of Raeford First Presbyterian Church, will speak to the Raeford Friendship Club Tuesday at Raeford United Methodist Church on St. Patrick's Day customs in Ireland. The meeting will start at 2:30 p.m.

Mark is a native of Northern Ireland. He came from that country last year to join the local church staff.

MOVING -- The old Carter home is shown on NC 211, South Main Street, near the Raeford city limits, late Tuesday morning as it was being moved South from its yard at 219 S. Main St., to a new site near Five Points and Quewhiffle. The route of the move bypassed the Raeford business district. The house was sold recently by the Carter family and has been unoccupied since the death of Robert Lee Carter about two years ago. Robert Lee Carter bought it in 1945. One of the Carters' five children who lived there is W.E. "Gene" Carter, president of The Bank of Raeford. He left in 1960 to work for Waccamaw Bank & Trust Co. The elder Carter owned and operated the Auto In, a service station, at South Main and Harris Avenue, across the street and on part of the present Edinborough Shopping Center property. The one-story four-bedroom frame house will become an active home again after it is established in its new location. (Staff photo by Bill Lindau).
