

Flora Crowley Retires

Flora S. Crowley recently completed 35 years continuous service with Burlington Industries.

She began work at Red Springs and transferred to Raeford as an entering hand in 1955.

She has worked in the Preparation Department since then except for a few months in 1964, when she worked in the Design Department.

She received a certificate, a diamond pin and a camera she selected as a gift for completing 35 years.

PROBLEM PESTS

During the past week, three specific pest problems have been brought to my attention by Hoke County citizens.

First, you've all noticed by now the white silk tents in the crotches of trees around the county. This pest, the eastern tent caterpillar, can be identified as a dark hairy caterpillar with a white stripe down the back, bordered with reddish-brown. Along each side is a row of oval blue spots and brown and yellow lines. The eastern tent caterpillar is not to be confused with the gypsy moth which has, starting from the head, five pairs of blue spots followed by six pairs of red spots. Tent caterpillars produce only one generation per year, and most of the year is spent in the egg stage.

To control tent caterpillars try disrupting their tent with a long pole. Sometimes they aren't able to recognize their tents once they've been disrupted. Burning out the tents is not recommended because fire will injure the tree and is also very hazardous. There are several insecticides labeled for tent caterpillars. Sevin, Diazinon, or Malathion, are all available at hardware or garden stores. Be sure to follow the directions for safe and effective use found on the pesticide label.

Another problem which literally has been popping up in some of your yards is the mole. In North Carolina it is illegal to kill moles with a poison. But there are two other methods. You can trap moles or you can use insecticides to kill the insects that moles eat.

The best mole trap is the spear type which is available at hardware or garden stores. You should place traps on the most frequently used tunnels or runways. To find these, cave in a short section of all visible tunnels, then check each day to see which runways the mole has reopened. Repeat this caving in and checking for two or three days before deciding which tunnels to trap. One or two traps should be sufficient for an average-sized lawn.

Controlling the insects that the moles eat requires two to three months for best results. You can contact the Extension office for recommendations on controlling soil insects.

And, finally, have you had problems with ants yet this year? Lawn ants or garden ants, unless they are of the fine ant species, really pose no problem except that of being a nuisance. Ants are in the garden because of plant lice or aphids. Aphids feed on vegetables by sucking the plant juices, and in their feeding process they secrete a sugary solution which attracts ants. Some effective pesticides are granules containing Dursban or sprays or granules of Diazinon. Always read the labels and follow the directions carefully.

For more specific information on fire ant control contact your County Extension Office at 875-3461.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Hoke County citizens who would like to learn more about sheep production will get an opportunity to do so on Saturday, May 22.

The Agricultural Research Service will sponsor a sheep production field day on one of its farms near North Carolina State University.

Richard Melton, Hoke County livestock agent, said the field day is the first event of its type in 25 years. It has been planned because of the resurgence of interest in sheep production in North Carolina. Melton also said that several inquiries about sheep production have been made by Hoke County residents.

The field day will cover all aspects of the husbandry and management of sheep. It will be a hands-on type of event where people can get involved in such things as trimming feet, handling wool and treating for internal parasites.

Hoke County citizens who would like to attend the field day should get in touch with Richard Melton at the Hoke County Extension office (875-3461). He can provide more information on the event, including a map of how to get there.

Archie King Retires

Archie King recently retired from the Raeford Plant of Burlington Industries.

King had been employed at the local plant since February 11, 1952, in the Weave Department where he served in several capacities over the years.

During retirement ceremonies, he was presented with a Retirement Plaque and a Retirement Bible.

From his fellow workers on the fifth and sixth shifts in the Weave Department, King received two rods and reels that he plans to put to good use.

King is an active fisherman and plans to spend a "good bit" of time doing just that.

Six Hoke Students Attend HOSA Congress

The Hoke County Chapter of Health Occupations Students of America had six delegates to attend the Sixth Annual HOSA Congress at the Hyatt House in Winston-Salem.

The delegates attended sessions which included Health Education information, leadership skills development, and listened to prominent guest speakers.

Competitive events were held including informative speech on current health issues, medical terminology spelling contest, poster contest, extemporaneous speaking contest, and job application/job interview contest.

Pat Kellerman, and Cheryl Farmer from Hoke County HOSA Chapter competed in the Informative Speech, and Medical Terminology contests.

Representing Hoke County as voting delegates were Teresa Pickett, Miss Kellerman, Debra Goodman, Ruth Wheeler, Miss Farmer, and Carol Davis.

Parliamentary procedure was followed, and all business sessions were conducted by students.
