IS YOUR WEDDING ETIQUETTE UP-TO-DATE?

Spring is here, and June weddings can't be far behind. So, as a special service to all you moms and friends of the bride, I've devised a simple wedding etiquette test to help you determine whether or not you're prepared to meet the challenge. All you have to do is decide whether the following statements are true or false:

1. Wedding invitations must be placed in two envelopes.
2. No abbreviations are used in addressing wedding invitations.
3. You should not put return addresses in wedding invitations.
4. If bridesmaids wear long dresses, the hems should touch the floor.
5. The bride and groom should not see each other on the wedding day until they meet at the altar.
6. At the rehearsal, a stand-in should take the part of the bride.
7. When a wedding must be postponed, all wedding gifts already received must be returned.

8. Divorced parents of the bride should not appear in the same wedding photograph.

9. The bride and her family should pay all the expenses of the reception.

10. The men in the wedding party always wear tuxedos at formal weddings.

Have you marked your answers? All right. Here are the answers, straight from Emily Post's Complete Book of Wedding Etiquette.

- (1) No longer. This traditional practice is rapidly going out of style.
- (2) Correct. Spell out all names in full, even middle names.
- (3) In the past it wasn't done; but today's postal regulations require return addresses on first-class mail.
- (4) Hems should be one inch from the floor. This reduces the possibility that bridesmaids will steal the show by falling down the steps.
- (5) Pure superstition. Some brides and grooms even have lunch together, along with the wedding party, on their wedding day.
- (6) Another old wives' tale. Ministers often prefer to have the bride participate so she will know what she is to do in the ceremony.
- (7) No. Only if a wedding is cancelled should gifts be sent back.
- (8) Correct. (9) This is traditional, but it has become perfectly acceptable for the groom's family to share in the reception expenses.
- (10) No. Tuxedos are not correct in the daytime. They should be worn only in the evening.

Give yourself a point for each correct answer. If your score was seven or less, better get a copy of the book.

PESTICIDE SAFETY

The summer growing season is again upon us.

Everywhere we look new growth can be seen. Farmers are planting, plowing and fertilizing their many different crops. Gardeners are diligently tending their green spots as well.

With all the hustle and bustle, many of us don't take the time to carefully examine what we are doing. One particular area I would like us to focus on is pesticide usage.

Many times we take pesticides for granted. We think they are only for killing insects, weeds or other pests. Well, a substance that will kill an insect or a weed will kill a human also if enough is taken into the body. There are several don'ts and do's which we should all follow when using pesticides.

First let's look at the don'ts of pesticide applications:

- (1) Don't get poisons on your skin.
- (2) Don't get poisons in or near your mouth.
- (3) Don't let children near poisons.
- (4) Don't spray on people or livestock.

pay costs for frivolous prosecution.

E-S Samuel Glenwood Lowe, Ft. Bragg, no operator's license, no financial responsibility in force, displaying a fictitious registration plate, and inspection certificate expired, six to 12 months suspended for two years, $150 and costs; $1 of fine is remitted.

Patricia McNeill, Rt. 3, Box 220A5, Raeford, worthless checks, $20 restitution to Quewhiffle Store, $37.48 restitution to M.L. Parks, and costs.

David George Kitchen, Fayetteville, speeding 68 in a 55 zone, $10 and costs.

Daryl William Ratz, Rt. 3, Box 20, Lumberton, speeding 70 in a 55 zone, $10 and costs.

(5) Don't let containers break or spill when moving them.

(6) Don't store chemicals out of their original, labeled containers.

Many of these are inter-related, yet they are all important. Here in Hoke County Number 4 presents a special problem sometimes. Any time a spray, mist, or fogging method of pesticide application is used some movement of the spray is going to take place.

Many times when people are driving along a road and see an airplane spraying a field they stop to watch. Well, that's when a problem occurs because a mist from the application could be carried on even the lightest of breezes. The potential for you to come in contact with a deadly pesticide increases if you watch an application going on. So next time you see an airplane or even a tractor in a field spraying, don't stop to watch -- You'll be doing yourself a big favor.

Now let's cover the does of pesticide use:

- (1) Observe re-entry times.
- (2) Mix poison carefully, don't spill it.
- (3) Lock up all poisons when you're not using them.
- (4) Always be fully clothed when applying pesticides.
- (5) Wash your boots used in an application inside and out.
- (6) Wash yourself thoroughly.
- (7) Wash your work clothes.
- (8) Rinse all empty containers and break them so they can't be used for anything else.

This growing season let's all be aware of the materials we handle. Read the labels fully and handle all poisons with care. Let's make sure we're all safe and not sorry this growing season.

Correction

Vickie Wright is not a former (nor present) inmate of the Sandhills Youth Center. An article published last week in The News-Journal referred to her and a man working with handicapped children as "former inmates." The line should have read "former inmate," referring to the man.

Mrs. Wright is an aide to an Upchurch class for handicapped students.

The News-Journal regrets the error, (which was not the contributing writer's).
