ness manager, went over the school budget item by item to show the needs.
At the commissioners' public hearing, Balfour pointed out to the audience that the budget shown and the tax rate can be changed before the commissioners adopt a budget and tax rate, and that the tax rate can come "up or down."

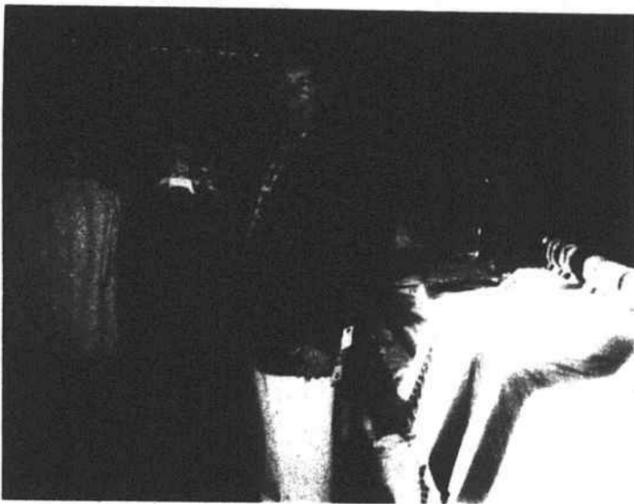

Autry, who appeared at the hearing with the members of the school board, said that "we've got some real problems" but indicated that he would not bring up the school financial matters at the public hearing since they would be taken up Tuesday night at the separate meeting of the school board with the commissioners.
He also said that he was not "all anti-Social Services" but that of the school system's total budget less than 10 per cent comes from the county while Social Services gets about 50 per cent. To this, Ken Witherspoon, director of the Hoke County Department of Social Services, replied that the county share of the Social Services budget is 9 to 10 per cent of the total, that the Social Services budget "does not reflect policy" of food stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and Medicare, among other items, just as Autry's budget doesn't show some specific school programs.

Earlier, in reference to the school system, Autry said, "I think we have reached the point (in Hoke) that the people have to decide whether progress can be maintained." He said before this that the Hoke schools have made "tremendous progress." Autry pointed as evidence of this progress to the appointments of two Hoke High seniors this year to the U.S. Military Academy, one to the U.S. Naval Academy Preparatory School (for subsequent admission to the Academy at Annapolis, Md.) and to the admission next year of two younger Hoke High students to the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics; and to the total of $110,000 in scholarships awarded to this year's graduating seniors.

The commissioners also during the hearing received a request for $2,360 more for the Sandhills (mental health) Center budget for the Hoke County Mental Health Unit. The money is needed to maintain the level of work done with alcoholics, drug abusers, and mentally retarded.

SCHOOL FOOD SERVICE -- Three of the members of staffs of Hoke County lunchrooms shown here with Clara Pope, county school lunchrooms supervisor, have trophies from the 1982 meeting of the North Carolina School Food Service Association. Juanita Clark, Upchurch, won first place in the breakfast division, Gayle Ellis of Hoke High was first in the sandwich plate and third in the breakfast divisions, and Margaret Quick, West Hoke, was second in breakfast plate and third in the salad plates divisions. Clara Pope and Beatrice Graham also attended the meeting. L-R -- Margaret Quick, Rosa Edwards, Isabelle Smith, Jean McPhatter, Clara Pope, Juanita Clark and Gayle Ellis.

BAND DIRECTOR HONORED -- Hoke County High School Band Director Jimmy James was honored early this month by friends and students' parents. To show their appreciation and gratitude for his service to the Hoke High students, he was presented a four-piece suit, a shirt, a tie, and a pair of shoes. "Thanks, Jimmy James, for a job well done," the parents said in a statement that day. James is shown here in the store where he received the gifts.
