

Council

institutions' building permit fees already paid, should the Baptist church be allowed a refund?

City Manager Ron Matthews earlier in the meeting informed the council that the city will receive no state help for establishing its industrial waste-water pretreatment program but that the program has been mandated.

He said it would take $15,000 to $20,000 to develop the program but that the state could be challenged on the refusal of assistance since the city is doing what it is being required to do but using a different method; consequently, it qualifies for state help.

The subject was tabled temporarily for further exploration.

The council also during the meeting agreed that Mayor John K. McNeill, Jr., should present to the State Department of Transportation on July 29 the city's message: to put the four-laning of U.S. 401 from the northern city limits to the Cumberland County line back in the DOT construction program for 1983.

The July 29 meeting is for the counties in highway Division Eight and will be held at Montgomery Technical Institute near Troy, starting at 2 p.m. It is one of a series of public meetings scheduled throughout the state for this month to update the 1982-1991 Transportation Improvement Program.

Earl Fowler, executive vice president of the Raeford-Hoke County Chamber of Commerce, stimulated the council's action when he told the council the four-laning project had been removed recently from the DOT list for the next 10 years.

Besides the mayor, Fowler and City Manager Ron Matthews will attend the Montgomery County meeting. The Hoke County government will be represented at the meeting by County Manager James Martin and probably one or more county commissioners.

During the Monday night meeting also the council adopted a motion to accept a recommendation of the City Planning Board that a request to rezone a South Main Street area to C-2 Commercial from Residential-8 be granted.

Upchurch made the motion to accept after the council was informed that the rezoning was wanted so a Federal Land Bank-Production Credit Association building could be established on the property. The council was informed by Julian Butler, representing the organization, that PCA-FLB does a low-volume business. This indicates traffic volume in the area won't be increased significantly by the introduction of the business.

The council also adopted a motion to accept a Planning Board recommendation to approve a planned subdivision to be developed by Avery Connell on North Fulton Street.

Around Town

twelve of us were together and we stood in line ten minutes to get into China's lovely exhibit? Our first day (Friday, July 9th) we did not find the grounds crowded. The second day (Saturday, July 10th) there were more fairgoers but still not so many that you could not move from one exhibit to another with ease. The sky was overcast and temperature not too high. Rains came but at night so it did not affect our activities. The live performances at the Philippine, Korean and Japan exhibits were great with song, dance and lovely costumes. I had the opportunity of making a long distance phone call to anywhere in the world from a Lincoln Continental. I chose Detroit and was fun to sit at the steering wheel and talk to Jane (our daughter) without the conventional phone (sounding device in sun visor - dial on dash). What will come next? We do not know.

Well I could go on with a lot of good things but I must report to class at 8:30 Monday morning (July 12th) at N.C. State summer school. With so much negative being said about the fair we wanted to report the positive - all 44 of us.

Sam, thanks for all of your cooperation to the Agricultural Extension Service and to the Extension Homemakers.
